Vandals hit Lost Colony construction site

The low income housing being constructed by the Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA) in the "Lost Colony," so called, got off to a bad start.

Vandals, last weekend, slashed all the tires, 14 in number, of the three working vehicles at the site. The slashing was designed to completely ruin the tires, and in the opinion of Inspector Mike Celata of the Wilmington police, was probably the work of adults.

Sand and woodchips were put into the gas tanks, and wiring was disconnected.

One of the vehicles, a "skidder" is used to pull out trees which have been cut down. The four tires on the vehicle cost $1200 each, and each tire had been cut in several places by someone who may have been using a chisel. According to Ken Evers of the Freedom Tire Company of Lawrence, the vandals cut the sides of the tires so as to prevent repairs. "They knew what they were doing" he said.

The "Lost Colony" is a part of northeastern Wilmington which can be reached only by going through North Reading. The Wilmington Housing Authority has engaged to construct four "low income" homes in the area, in Wilmington. Wilmington residents are to get a preference according to the WHA Executive Director Lillian Buckley. Low income families are defined as earning between $25,000 and $30,000 a year. Each of the four homes will be single family with three bedrooms.

Tires flattened

The vandalism was discovered Sunday morning by the North Reading Police. The owner of the three vehicles, Timberline Tree Service of Wakefield was notified, and a call made to the Wilmington Police. Inspector Mike Celata told the Town Crier that he found a report on his desk Monday morning.

Monday morning Diane Harris, project representative for the architect, CPF Demenich-Hicks, Inc. of Boston reported to the office of the WHA Monday morning, after having been on the site. John MacDonald of the Sciaba Construction Inc. of Reedville, principal contractor arrived shortly after Harris, and Bill Strob of the WHA came after MacDonald. All visited the site of the vandalism.

The WHA is using the site because of lack of suitable housing sites in Wilmington. The choice of that site led to protests by resident of North Reading, and the WHA arranged to have a discussion with residents of the local K of C Hall in North Reading.

Several North Reading selectmen were present for the discussion, which lasted about an hour, and in general was good natured. Some persons did have an aggressive attitude.

No Federal funds are involved in the construction of the homes, but state funds are being contributed by the Economic Office of Communities and Development (EOCD).

Wakefield contractor chosen for Middlesex Pines completion

by Arlene Surprenant
Victoria Excavation, a Wakefield firm, was the lowest of seven bidders for a job to complete roads and other work in the Middlesex Pines subdivision. The firm offered a $117,505 bid. The highest bid came in at $219,000. Consulting engineers Fay, Spofford, and Thorndike recommended the town go with the lowest bidder.

The Wilmington Planning Board now has the job of whittling the cost down to the $80,000 available to do the outstanding work left by developer Patrick Cone.

At their meeting Tuesday night, planners asked three neighborhood spokesmen to prioritize which work neighbors would consider most essential. The bid covered such things as earth removal, grading, drainage, pavement, loam and seeding, trees, and sidewalks. Neighbors seemed to feel trees, granite curbing, and sidewalks may have to be temporarily dropped. Chairman Carole Hamilton suggested they include curbs in the work as it would be difficult to put them in at a later date. She also was emphatic against setting a precedent in waiving some of the work and questioned what impact the board's action would have on other projects on the books.

To avoid a repetition of Cone's action in pulling out without completing the roadwork, the board is recommending a one hundred percent bond before the work begins.

In other action, developer Joseph Langone questioned Wilmington's process of documenting easements, claiming the present process is costly, a duplication of effort and paperwork, and open to the possibility of human error.

"Nobody documents easements like we do," said Langone, who added he had spent two weeks researching the process in nearby towns. Langone told board members in case of error,

Police contract settled

by Arlene Surprenant
Except for some language to be finalized, Wilmington police are ready to sign a new two year contract. The contract will give officers a seven percent salary increase for fiscal 1987, retroactive to July 1, and a six percent increase for the next fiscal year. The action follows a week of picketing to bring the union's grievances to the public eye.

According to representative Jim Peterson of Local 318 of the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, members agreed unanimously to accept a second offer by the town at last Thursday's department meeting. Previously, the town had made a proposal which was countered by one from the union. In this last proposal, said Peterson, "longevity is not an issue" and remains as is in the contract.

Wilmington officers had been at odds with the town over the issue of longevity, performance and proper compensation for their duties, and working without a contract for 10 months. The two-year contract will replace the usual one-year contract agreed to by both parties.

According to a union memo confirmed by Deputy Chief Bernard Nally other provisions in the contract include an increase in the detail rate to $19 and a 50 cent increase in the shift differential for night duty; an "incentive bonus" for notification of early retirement; and a drug and alcohol screening policy.

"I think it's (early retirement clause) an incentive as officers approach age 60. This is kind of a young man's job," said Nally, who explained if an officer notifies the department 12 months before retiring, he will qualify for a bonus on his last day on the job.

The screening policy allows for the testing of officers for drug and alcohol use.

"Apparently it can be negotiated like that," said Nally.

The new contract is expected to be signed on or about May 25.

"I feel the town made a very fair offer; both the department and the town will benefit," Peterson told the Town Crier.

Wilmington residents walked 20 miles for hunger

by Arlene Surprenant
Sandra Volpe of Reed Street and John and Sandy Creeth of Biggar Avenue were among an estimated 25,000 citizens of the Commonwealth participating in Sunday's 18th annual Walk for Hunger. The event, sponsored by Project Bread, reportedly raised $2.5 million which will be distributed to local emergency food programs and soup kitchens as well as to overseas food outlets.

"It was absolutely incredible -- a real high," said Volpe of the sea of bodies spanning the 20 mile route through Brookline and Cambridge. She and the Creeths completed the course in a little over five hours, raising a total of $190 from pledged supporters in the process.

Following an 8 a.m. ceremony at Boston Common, they set off at a 15-minute-a-mile pace. On their backs were backpacks containing candy, apples, extra socks and money. They also carried radios and cameras. At checkpoints established along the route they were offered water and, halfway through, carrots, oranges, yogurt, juice, and milk.

"The people on the committee were just wonderful supporters. They cheered the walkers on. It was like a carnival atmosphere the whole way," recalled Volpe.

How did the three Wilmingtonites manage to walk the 20 miles? For one thing, all three are avid walkers at home. Volpe walks four miles every day despite the demands of two children and a teaching job in the Billerica School System. The Creeths walk an average of two miles each day. They also developed a rhythm that kept them going after the first two miles, said Volpe, and took care not to sit down for fear "we'd never get up again."

They walked over what Volpe described as "rugged terrain" down narrow walkways, under tunnels, and along sidewalks. They passed casual walkers, families with children in wagons and carriages, people in wheelchairs, and groups picnicking along the way.

In recognition of their participation, they received a Walk for Hunger patch and a certificate signed by the board of directors of Project Bread for completing the course.

When asked if she'd walk again next year, Volpe didn't even hesitate.

"Without question," she said, especially in light of the fact that all she suffered was one blister and a sweat soaked shirt.

Creative dance at Patten

Tewksbury's Patten Public Library will sponsor a program on creative movement for children Monday morning, May 18 at 9:30 in the library's conference room. The program is designed for children ages three to five years of age. Dance instructor Carolyn Toloczko of Newburyport will conduct the workshop. Ms. Toloczko, who holds a master's degree in theater arts and dance education from Emerson College, teaches dance and creative movement for both adults and children at several locations in the Newburyport area.

Advance registration is required and the program is limited to Tewksbury children only. There is no charge for participants, but the class size is limited.

This event is part of a guest artist series currently being offered by the Friends of the Tewksbury Library. It is being funded through a grant from the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council, as administered by the Tewksbury Arts Lottery Council.

Other programs in this series have included an egg-drying program for children, and a calligraphy workshop for adults, both in April. Plans are currently being made for summer programs for school age children, as well as for additional programs for adults in the fall.

In the past, the Friends of the Library have sponsored similar programs funded through the Tewksbury Arts Lottery Council, the most recently being the highly successful "Arts on the Move" cultural events series. The public library's art book collection has also benefitted from the arts lottery, with a large number of art technique books purchased with an arts lottery grant.

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

As a newly elected member of the Wilmington Board of Selectmen I had a series of questions and requests that I put before the town manager, as is the custom of that board during the appropriate time on the agenda.

These were all legitimate questions and Buzz agreed to get back to me with the answers in a short period of time.

These questions dealt with a variety of subjects including the Redevelopment Authority.

I was astounded to read in your paper a series of personal insults and an attack on my reputation especially by chairman Donovan.

(He) was really taken back by what I asked. That's too bad.

These are the questions which I put forward regarding the Redevelopment Authority.

1) Account #8750054108 - Town Center #47,238.28.

Why is the Redevelopment Authority spending money from their account for this State Project - And how much have they spent so far?

2) Why are they paying the Wilmington Chamber Of Commerce for office and support services and is this legal? They do have office space in the Town Hall don't they?

3) Chairman Donovan in his memo says they won't be audited for two more years. This bothers me, because the authority was severely criticized in Auditor Finnegan's last report for keeping more than $500,000 in an uninsured account in the Commercial Bank and Trust. The Town could have lost these monies, and it would not have been corrected if it weren't for former State Auditor Finnegan's office.

4) I would like the names of the purchasers and the amounts of money they spent to acquire industrial parcels from the Redevelopment Authority. I would also like the size of the parcels and the dates when they were purchased?

5) Finally--It is my understanding when the Redevelopment Authority came into being many years ago they were supposed to return all of those monies back to the taxpayers of Wilmington when this project was completed.

6) If they don't I intend to move for an article at the Town Meeting to use these monies (which the taxpayers of Wilmington don't even know exist) for a Youth Center or just return it to the taxpayers. If this can't be done by Town Meeting action only, I will pursue other legal remedies to accomplish this.

7) Would you also get me the original Town Meeting Article which brought this body into existence and the amount of seed monies the town may have given to the authority.

I trust the Town Manager will have the appropriate answers for me at our next meeting, if not before.

The Authority in their response in the paper tried to imply that they had no deposit problem at the Commercial Bank - Let me quote from State Auditor Finnegan's report.

Explanations of Findings and Deficiencies

"1) Bank Account Balance Not Fully Insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

During the audit period, the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority maintained an interest bearing money-market account in the Commercial Bank and Trust Company in Wilmington. This account had a balance, as of June 30, 1984, of $156,231; the balance increased to $557,314 as of May 31, 1985. However, only $100,000 of this balance is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC).

"It is FDIC policy to insure bank accounts only up to a maximum of $100,000 per depositor. As a result, the Authority risks a potential loss of at least $457,314 if all the monies were improperly withdrawn from the account. A similar loss could also occur if the bank were to fail.

"For these reasons, the Authority's bank account balance should never exceed the maximum amount insured by FDIC. The Authority, however, was unaware of the FDIC policy.

"Recommendation: The Authority should either:

"1. Withdraw sufficient funds from the Commercial Bank and Trust Company so that the remaining balance would be $100,000 or less and, therefore, fully insured, and then open accounts with other depositories that pay comparable interest rates; or

"2. Have the Commercial Bank and Trust Company pledge collateral against the funds not covered by FDIC. In this manner, all Authority funds would be protected against possible loss."

Only after he was cited by the State did Jay move the money.

I don't think the citizens of this Town were aware of how much of our money this board had on deposit.

Donovan's statement

"The money is returned in the form of annual taxes and additional revenue" is another insult to the Town -

The money they received (Not a lot of money for the Industrial Land they sold) should be returned, because this belongs to us also. This smokescreen put up by Donovan will not stop me from following this matter all the way through.

Your reporter neglected to mention that I also asked the following questions and requested the following information from the Town Manager?

1) Have you made any overtures to anyone regarding the Lexington Town Manager's Job?

2) I would like the names of the owners of everyone who now owns property along the route of the proposed Town Center bypass. I would also like to know when they purchased the property. If the owners are Realty Trust I would also like to know who the trustees are.

As you can see I didn't single out the Redevelopment Authority. Surprenant said I should try to get along. I just want to answer that by saying the people of this Town sent me to do a job and that comes first. I didn't run for this office because I wanted to Join a Club.

Finally--How do you expect reporter Surprenant to give fair coverage to this subject (which she didn't) when authority member Surprenant who joined in the personal insults to my character is her husband?

I thought it was a real laugh when she said in her story - "When contacted by the Town Crier Vaughn Surprenant said - (where did she interview him - across from the breakfast table or at dinner?) Give Me a Break! This isn't the first time she's been accused of bagging the news.

If Donovan wants to continue to make this a personal fight that is fine with me. I've got a thick pad of paper and plenty of pens.

His contribution to this community to date has been Zilch.

Sincerely,
Selectman Michael V. McCoy

NOTE: If your job as selectman, Mr. McCoy, entails questioning the finances and practices of the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority, my job as reporter is to give an accurate overview of your meeting and see that your questions were answered by someone in a position to reply: ie, the WRA chairman and the treasurer, who also happens to be my husband. No reporter can cover every last word of a meeting. I did remain true to the gist of what you said.

A few clarifications are in order. After reading Mr. Finnegan's official audit report, I came to the conclusion there was no "severe criticism" made by the auditor. He merely made suggestions which were followed through by the WRA board. For the record, you did not raise your questions at the "appropriate time" but during a discussion on a related issue. You were told to bring them up under new business.

You also raised two questions about the town manager and the WRA chairman's wife which I felt were completely out of line and would totally embarrass you; therefore I deleted them from my article.

Obviously you got a good laugh out of my "contacting" my husband, who as treasurer was able to provide another side to this story. I imagine I'm in the same position as your uncle Jim Miceli when he "contacts" you at your place of business to be a guest on his cable TV show.

Finally, I've always felt people in official positions as well as those in the media should not abuse what little power or influence they have. Words, as you know, are powerful tools and must be used carefully. They should not be used for ulterior motives.

A. Surprenant

The Humble Farmer Gramp Wiley has many friends

Gramp Wiley thinks he is clever. When I recently spoke to the lumber dealers' association he asked me if they paid me by the bored foot.

He is an observant man, for he pointed out - quite correctly - that Mac is so secure that even though he spent three weeks in Europe in 1975 he doesn't flaunt it by crossing his sevens.

And who but my wise old neighbor noted that our state house might easily generate the entire state's electricity by burning legislative hearings documents?

I confess that I foolishly heated my bathroom with electricity every winter until last fall. That's when I chopped an eight inch hole in the kitchen ceiling over the wood stove. When I bragged to Gramp that I was now saving $20 a month on my power bill he figured for a minute, looked up and said if I'd take the whole ceiling down I'd make money.

Unlike your conservative old philosopher, Gramp keeps up with the times. He was selected person of the year by Ms. magazine for demanding that we change the shape of nursing bottles because the traditional nipple on the end is sexist.

When I rush into his trailer with exciting news, Gramp has always already heard it. For example, a recent newspaper article described an artificial intelligence machine at the University of Southern California simulates human behavior. Gramp said he'd already seen the thing on television. According to Gramp, the machine begged viewers to send it ten bucks - if they didn't it said that on June first the Great Japanese Computer on Mount Fuji was going to call it home.

My neighbor's not so secret pet peeve is the old characters who poke along on the highways with no particular place to go. Their bumper stickers say, "Retired, no phone, no job, no place to go." After years of obscure, unimportant jobs they are now out on the highway holding up people who do have places to go and things to do. They'll get into the flow of traffic by pulling out abruptly and then poke along. Their eyes are never on the road - always on the rear view mirror, relishing their power.

Gramp says the Russians could extract all the secrets they wanted by putting their victims into traffic behind one of those old coots. They'd be spilling their guts before they got to Searsport.

He can keep his mouth shut when it is prudent to do so, though. The other day he mentioned that he was quite friendly with a local doctor. When I asked him who it was he wouldn't tell me - said, "if you had to practice medicine in this country would you want anyone to know?"

He did say that his doctor friend had spent a couple of weeks on a small island somewhere between Florida and South America. The doctor didn't care for the island because the prices were so high but said there was basically nothing wrong with the place that a little poverty wouldn't cure. The doc's wife loved it and spent the week shopping with credit cards. He didn't go with her - claimed he couldn't stand the smell of plastic burning. Said he had to have the cards retreaded when they got back home.

Another of Gramp's friends recently spent a week in Northern Ireland. While walking back to his hotel one evening one of those terrorists stuck a gun in his back and hissed, "Are you a Catholic or a Protestant?"

Gramp says his friend breathed a sign of relief and said, "I'm Jewish."

Whereupon the terrorist replied, "I've got to be the luckiest Arab in Ireland."

25 years ago

The May 10, 1962 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Commander Elect Eddie Forrest of the Tattersall Chapter DAV, was an hour and three minutes late for installation ceremonies - due to a flat tire.

Elaine Bertwell of Chestnut was on the dean's list of senior honor students at Chamberlayne Junior College.

While TM Cecil Lancaster was in Chicago attending an International School for town managers, Mrs. Mary Denault was acting town manager.

The board of assessors was expected to announce shortly that real estate valuations would soon be at a rate of 100 percent instead of 50 percent.

What's really going on here?

There has been a change in the political winds in Wilmington in recent weeks. The election of Michael McCoy to the Wilmington Board of Selectmen has ushered in a new and distinctly different era in Wilmington politics.

McCoy made it clear in his first selectmen's meeting that he is there to knock heads. And by no small coincidence, the scalps he is grabbing for are those of his uncle's enemies.

What we're really watching is next year's elections, starting right now. Miceli would like to control the board of selectmen while holding on to his own state rep seat.

It comes as no surprise that McCoy's first target is Jay Donovan, chairman of the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority. Donovan is what you would call a "well-connected Democrat," in that he has some friends in the Dukakis administration. He also takes delight in being a thorn in Miceli's side.

As chairman of the WRA, Donovan has been heading up an effort to plan what Wilmington Center would look like if the state were to construct a new bridge. That project would destroy the existing buildings. Without a plan as to how those buildings would be replaced, no accurate picture of the project could be presented.

The planning board, of which McCoy was a silent member for three years, is generally busy regulating development.

The WRA received town meeting approval to work on the Wilmington Center project and develop those plans. But there was one critical element which never developed -- cooperation between the WRA and Rep. Jim Miceli. The feud between Donovan and Miceli was as much the reason for this as anything.

McCoy's second target is Selectman Bob Cain, who is up for re-election next year. Ten years ago, Cain ran against Miceli for the state rep seat, then vacant due to the death of Bob's father, Rep. Fred Cain.

As a selectman, Cain is not afraid to speak his mind. At the recent DPW hearing on the Wilmington Center project, Cain was one of the few people to speak in favor of the project. He knew that it was an unpopular position, but he was there to speak his mind.

Such frankness is, for a politician, like risking your life for what you believe. In a world where parrots win elections, honesty bodes self-destruction. One person described Cain as having all the political instincts of a kamikaze pilot.

Last month's election demonstrated that Miceli has enough power to have someone else elected as a selectman. When Cain comes up for re-election next year, he will undoubtedly face a candidate backed by Miceli.

Although he is no longer on the board, former selectman Rocco DePasquale is also a target. Rocco is a long-time ally of Donovan, and it was Rocco who convinced WRA member and former selectman Carl Backman to run for selectman this year.

Rocco is a McCoy target because it now looks like he is planning to run against Miceli for state rep.

Another target is Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, who is generally regarded as non-political. However, he is a symbol of Rocco's era as a selectman, and certainly is not in Miceli's camp.

One person at the town hall put it aptly -- "McCoy is trying to play big-city politics in a small town."

Redevelopment Authority salvaged tax title property

Imagine a 40-acre tract of land which paid only $608 in taxes every year. That was the case in Wilmington, about a quarter century ago. The land was southerly of Eames Street.

A real estate development company, back about the time of the Spanish American War had laid out many houselots, 25 feet wide and 35 feet long. Those lots were sold to people who had hopes of building a little home, out in the country. No one ever built any.

It became a sort of horror story, legally and fiscally speaking. After a couple of years those who had purchased land became tired of paying taxes, and just stopped. The town then sold the land to new owners at tax auctions. After a couple of years the new owners would stop paying.

The game went on for years, with successive owners abandoning their property.

In the early 1950's, Town Manager Dean Cushing set the principal assessor to "cleaning" up the land titles. Frank Walters chased down all the heirs to persons who had owned land in one particular part. Some heirs lived in Greece, and had never heard of Wilmington.

After the titles were clear the town sold the land to a company named National Polychemicals. It was a good job. It had been done the hard way.

The adjacent area, 40 acres of land, was near the Woburn Loop of the Boston & Maine Railroad. That, too, was a mixed-up mess.

In the mid 1950's another town manager, Joseph Courtney, decided that there could be a law to be used, instead of an assessor chasing all over the place. He devised a law that could do the work by using the powers of Eminent Domain, a law for improving "blighted land."

That law was passed by the state legislature. It would allow eminent domain proceedings, as Courtney had suggested and the work would be done by a Redevelopment Authority, a state commission with local personnel.

Courtney had started the ball rolling, but at that point he left for other employment before any work had been done to clear the titles in those 40 acres.

A few years later a then town manager suddenly fired the Chief Assessor, Stanley Webber by name. No explanation was given, either then or later.

Webber was a responsible person. He had a lot of experience in town government.

A new assessor was appointed, a man who was soon assessing the town by sections, a program over a period of years. It is possible that the reason Webber was fired was because he would not do as his successor did. Anyway, the practice brought on law suits, and the assessor left for other climes.

Meanwhile, Webber became executive director of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce. He drew the attention of the Chamber directors to the non-paying land, off Eames Street. The Chamber suggested an article in the Town Meeting, and as a result the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority was started.

Over the years, there has been much unpaid work by the members of the WRA. Not everything has been rosy.

But the title to that land was cleared, and a number of industrial firms are now located on what became Jewel Drive, off Eames Street. There was no cost to the town, nor taxpayers.

The WRA earned over $500,000, money that is now in the bank for the benefit of the town. The Town Meeting has voted that the WRA should do its part toward solving the problems of Wilmington Square, and that it can assist in solving other problems.

The 1987 valuation of those industrial firms is $9,546,000. The taxes to be paid amount to $212,875.

That is a little more than $608. And, it can be said, it was all in accordance with the laws of Massachusetts.

School band returns

Members of the Tewksbury High School Band and Chorus just returned from a three day tour of western Massachusetts and northern Connecticut. First on a schedule of many events was a performance for the entire student body of Palmer High School in Palmer.

The musicians enjoyed sightseeing, shopping, sports activities as well as roller skating and a performance of "42nd Street" at a dinner theater near Hartford, Connecticut.

The band, chorus, colorguard and jazz band are now planning their annual spring concert for Wednesday, May 13. This year the concert will be held in the auditorium at the high school at 7:15 p.m.

Preceding the concert will be a spaghetti supper in the cafeteria, which is adjacent to the auditorium. You may attend and join us for supper between 5 and 7 p.m. for only $2.00 per person. After supper you may attend the concert.

Tickets for the concert are adults, $3; senior citizens, $2 and students/children, $1. Tickets for both events are available from band, chorus, and colorguard members. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Dick Smith

Retirement is not quite what it is cracked up to be. Just ask Dick Smith of Dorothy Avenue, Wilmington.

Dick, after 40 years in General Electric, Lynn, retired April 1. He thought he was entitled to a few days of rest, and maybe some golf.

Remember those 30 days of April? Rain, and more rain, and then seven inches of snow on April 27.

It was almost enough to make him want to go back to work. Only three days were good enough for a golf game!

May is the month for morels

by Capt. Larz Neilson
It is that time of the year - the time to see if any little morels are growing, somewhere in the neighborhood. Morels are a fungus, just like mushrooms, and are probably the finest tasting fungus to be found in New England.

A half dozen years ago the writer had never seen a morel. To questions about them he denied that they grow in this part of the country. Then, on the 15th of May one fine spring day the writer found a morel growing near the lilac bushes, behind the house where he lives.

Since then, every year, in the middle of May there have been more morels to be found - all so far, in Wilmington. Undoubtedly there are morels to be found also, in Tewksbury.

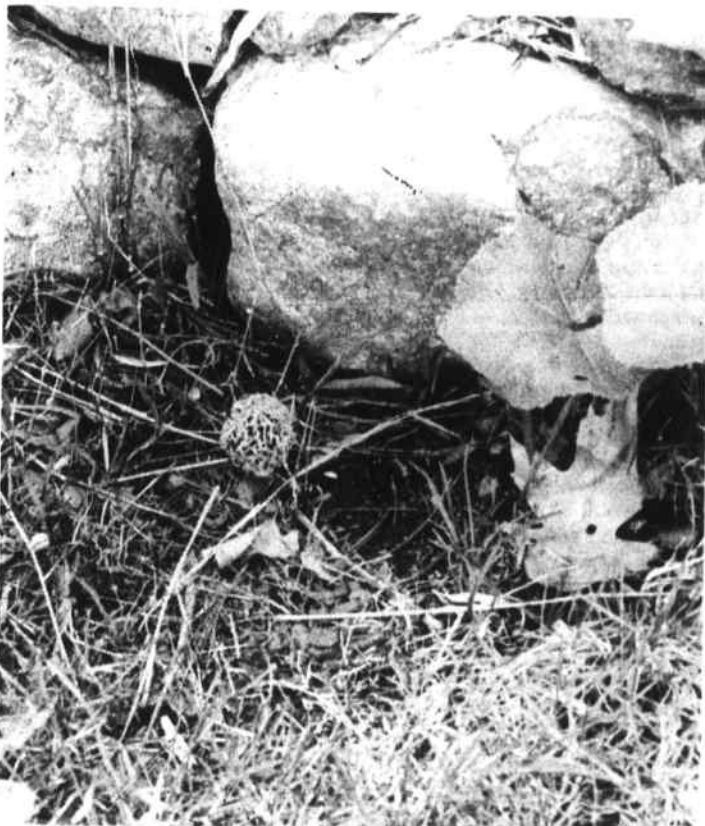

To make it a rule and say that morels grow in grass may possibly be wrong, but all that have been seen so far were found in grass.

At the Bertwell place, on Chestnut Street the morels were found on a rocky hillside - in grass. At the Duggan place on Westdale Avenue they were found in a sort of rock garden, but in grass. And, at the Ardolino home on Broad Street morels were found in several places, in grass.

Most persons who have called the publisher of this paper about morels have been afraid to eat them. Thus the publisher was able to take them home in triumph.

Possibly now those persons are convinced, but, sad to say, morels never seem to grow in the second year on the same site.

The publisher is willing to visit any home in Tewksbury or Wilmington where morels have been found, to certify them. Just call 658-2346 during office hours.

Morel A morel, growing amid grass but not on a lawn, at the Bertwell home on Chestnut Street in Wilmington.

Town Planner addresses Tewksbury ACT

The Associated Citizens of Tewksbury (ACT) is pleased to announce the success of its first series of lectures to introduce public figures in their official capacity to our townspeople.

On Tuesday, April 28, the town planner Charles Frederiksen spoke for almost two hours leading a lively discussion. Questions from the crowd indicated a wide range of interests, from the responsibilities of the planning board, through legal do's and don'ts to affordable housing (the so-called "anti-snob zoning" of Chapter 774.) Several questions pertained to the board of appeals, and Scott Consaul, associate member of that board, was able to field some of those questions.

Mr. Frederiksen was particularly enthusiastic about the two year old "site plan review" process whereby a developer must conform to town requirements in order to be issued a permit. If these stipulations are not met, that permit may be revoked with ensuing fines if compliance is not quickly addressed. In fact, almost all sites are developed as agreed, which indicates the success of early review and timely adjustments. He also re-emphasized the need for an industrial super road from North Street along the northerly side of Route 495 to the interchange to provide traffic relief to the North Tewksbury area at the North Street/Andover Street intersection, especially after Raytheon opens next spring.

With reference to zoning changes, Mr. Frederiksen spoke again about the necessity of attending town meetings where all such changes require a two-thirds majority. A healthy representation of unbiased citizens there ensures the town's best defense. Anybody has the right to request a zoning change, but it's up to the voters to decide whether the change is in the best interest of the town. ACT urges all of us to attend town meeting during this first week in May. We wish to thank Charles Frederiksen for an interesting and informative evening. We'd also like to applaud those in the audience who attended despite the snow.

It's YOUR Money

by Joyce Brisbois
Certified Public Accountant

WHAT KIND OF INCOME?

We're all familiar with earned vs. unearned income - the money you work to earn against the money your money earns for you. Now the new tax law further differentiates between types.

PORTFOLIO INCOME is the money you get from interest, dividends, rents, royalties, capital gains and the like. You can no longer offset tax-shelter losses with this kind of income.

NET INVESTMENT INCOME is portfolio income less portfolio losses and expenses. If you borrow to invest, you can deduct the interest you pay, up to your net investment income.

PASSIVE INCOME comes from rentals and other financial activities in which you do not materially participate - usually, tax shelters. Only passive income can offset tax shelter losses. (Exception: for shelters entered into before October 22, 1986, 65 percent of excess shelter losses can be deducted this year; deduction will be phased out by 1991.)

April was Library Media Month

During the month of April, School Library Media Month was celebrated across Massachusetts and throughout the nation. Last May, Governor Michael Dukakis and the Massachusetts Legislature signed a bill proclaiming April as School Library Media Month, and declared the month a time for celebrating and promoting the many functions of school library media centers.

Accordingly, the Massachusetts Association of Educational Media encouraged schools throughout the Commonwealth to plan promotional activities to help every member of the school and community realize the major role library media centers play in the educational process.

MAEM also sponsored a statewide bookmark, poster and video contest to further encourage all students in promoting school library media month. The bookmark contest was conducted for grades K through four, the contest for grades five through eight and the video contest for grades nine through 12. Each bookmark and poster contained a design and/or words to promote library media month.

Contests were held within local schools and those winning entries were submitted to MAEM for final judging. The first and second place winners in the state for each category will receive a $100 savings bond and a $50 savings bond respectively, and the winning poster and bookmark will be framed and returned to their school library for display. The top 12 finalists in the video contest will be entered by MAEM in the Fourth Annual Massachusetts Community Television Contest.

The Loella Dewing School in Tewksbury entered the Massachusetts Association of Educational Media's bookmark and poster contests. Mrs. Carol Rodgers, art specialist at the school, supervised the art work. The winning bookmark was drawn by Jaclyn Orpen in Grade two. The runners-up were Peter Saber, Nicholas Solis and Randy Stanco (all second graders); Cindy Burke and Brian Donoghue, Grade three; and Amy Atherton, Derek Slowe, and Paul Stevens, all in fourth grade.

Great Race to the Sea will take place May 16

Preparations are now underway for the annual Great Race to the Sea, put on by the Shawsheen Watershed Environmental Action Team (S.W.E.A.T.).

The 48-mile canoe race follows the Shawsheen River from Tewksbury to the confluence of the Merrimack River, then on to the sea at Newburyport.

"Great Race to the Sea IX" is slated to begin at 7 a.m. on May 16, with a flotilla of canoes leaving the Knights of Columbus parking lot on Main Street, Tewksbury. The canoe race will then proceed to Cashman's Park in Newburyport, near the entrance to the Atlantic Ocean.

Entrants will be provided with maps and safety rules, which include four required portages, or places where canoes must be carried. One of the portages will allow safe passage around the Andover roll dam on the Shawsheen River where Scott Braciska of Wilmington was drowned during an earlier Great Race to the Sea.

On Friday, May 15, a rules and safety program will be held at the Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club headquarters on Chandler Street.

Sign-in and canoe safety checks will begin at 6 a.m. on race day at the K of C. The race begins at 7 a.m. sharp, to allow canoe racers to meet the high tide at Newburyport, which will take place at roughly 2 p.m.

Canoe race rules include the wearing of approved flotation devices, no drugs or alcohol, and a standing order to assist any swamped canoe on the Merrimack, under penalty of disqualification.

Racers will be required to sign a release form prior to beginning the race to the sea. A bicycle race is also planned, to begin at 1 p.m. at Tewksbury Town Hall.

For further information, contact Bob Rauseo at 851-9505.

Thank you

Please allow me the opportunity to use your medium to express my gratitude.

First, I thank the Town Crier for fair and equal opportunity to announce and express my candidacy. It was the backbone of my campaign.

I am most grateful for the opportunities given to me by the Democratic Town Committee, The Council on Aging, and the League of Women Voters. I appreciated their gracious invitations to introduce myself among the other candidates and the townspeople. It was most encouraging and enlightening to meet so many kind and enthusiastic people of Wilmington.

Special thoughts and thanks to all the candidates, from each race, for the wonderful experience of sharing time and effort with them. I wish each of them every success in their futures.

Last, but not least, to those who stood by me at the polls, either with signs or friendship and/or behind the curtain - I say, very special "thank you."

With every click of the blue lever on April 18, 1987, I know and felt my efforts were well worth it. Thank you, one and all, for letting me know I am a winner in the personal and private sense of your confidence.

Most gratefully yours,
Andrea M. Paglia

Wilmington police news

During the week ending May 5, Wilmington police officers responded to 11 accidents, one fire, 30 alarms, made 18 arrests and seven protective custody detentions.

Nine disturbances were quieted along with two domestic problems. Seven incidents of suspicious activity were checked out; three trespassing complaints, a trailbike complaint and three complaints involving traffic were logged.

Five break and entries were investigated along with two liquor related problems, two missing persons and 15 incidents of vandalism.

Tuesday night, following an accident near Mr. Spumoni's on Main Street, Officer Mauriello arrested Jane Ann LaCasse, 23, of Foxhill Road, Burlington. LaCasse was charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. She was held overnight to appear in Woburn District Court on Wednesday.

Wednesday evening Officer Jim Peterson, acting on citizens' reports of someone acting suspicious behind Cumberland Farms Store on Main Street, investigated and arrested three local juveniles. The group was charged with larceny from a freight car parked behind the store. After consultation with parents of the boys and juvenile officer Bob Spencer, all three youths were admitted to the juvenile division in certain cases out of the main criminal justice system into a program geared specifically for young people and administered on a local basis.

Thursday morning at 3:30, Officer Jim Hanlon arrested a Lawrence man on a default warrant. Ezra Chidavaenzi of Grace Drive, Lawrence was later turned over to Lawrence officers for his appearance in court.

Two men were arrested on warrants Thursday evening. At 9 p.m. Officer Steve Mauriello arrested Paul Cantwell of Temple Street, Tewksbury on the basis of a warrant issued on a receiving stolen property charge. At 11 p.m. Officer Mauriello arrested Joel Ryan of Aldrich Road on a Wilmington warrant of default on a breaking and entry charge. Both men were bailed for Monday court appearances.

Friday afternoon two men were also arrested on default warrants. Sgt. Palmer arrested Shawn Murray, 11 Hathaway Rd., Wilmington, age 21, on a default warrant, and Officer Pat King picked up a Brian Dias, 34 Maplewood Ave., Billerica from Billerica officers on the basis of a Woburn District Court default warrant.

At 9 p.m. Friday, Officer Frank Hancock arrested George Crispo, Jr. of Nesmith Street, Lowell on Main Street near the town park. He was charged with operating under the influence of liquor which was his fifth such offense within the past six years.

Saturday morning at 7:30 Officer Charlie Fiore arrested Michael Donnell, 25 of Gedick Road, Burlington on the basis of a state police default warrant issued by Topsfield barracks.

Officer Richter arrested a local youth on liquor charges Saturday at 12:20 a.m. Joseph S. Brennan, 19 of Mill Road, Wilmington was charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol and speeding.

At 2 a.m. Saturday Officer Pat King was involved in a two state chase up Route 93 that eventually involved police from Methuen, state police, N.H. State Police, along with Salem, Windham, Derry and Londonderry, N.H. departments. Londonderry police finally arrested Anthony Troiani of Gorham Street, Somerville and charged him with aggravated driving under the influence, resisting arrest, failure to stop for a police officer, reckless operating and speeding.

Officer King will file charges in Woburn District Court for operating under the influence, endangering, failing to stop and speeding. Troiani was held in the Londonderry jail in lieu of $1100 cash bail. By coincidence there are two former Wilmington police officers now working for Londonderry, P.D. - Steven Parsons and Maureen LeGrand.

Officer Richter arrested Kevin Kelly, 19 of Robert Road, Salem, N.H. at 4 a.m. Saturday charging him with operating under the influence. He will be arraigned in Woburn District Court Monday where his license will be suspended for 90 days after failing a breath test with a score of .13.

Saturday night Sgt. Gable arrested Wayne Mountain of Pond Street, Billerica at the Billerica P.D. on the basis of a Woburn Court default warrant charging non support. He was held for the weekend to appear Monday in court.

Sunday morning three people were arrested on liquor related charges. Officer Paul Chalifour arrested Kenneth Bussey, 33 of Lane Drive, Allentown, N.H.

charging him with operating under the influence. The arrest was made in Wilmington. He was later bailed for a Monday court appearance.

Officer Bob Richter arrested two youths for underage possession of alcohol. Andrew Rokejnetz, Jr., 17 of Broad Street and Ernie Boudreau, 18 of Rhodes Street, both of Wilmington were charged with underage possession of alcohol.

Early Monday morning Officers Chalifour and Hanlon arrested James E. Clifford, formerly of Wilmington, now of Lowell, on the basis of several default warrants issued by Medford, Foxboro, and Metro police. Medford's officers picked him up to appear in Malden district court.

Officer Jim White arrested James Murphy, Jr. 831 Main Street, Sunday night on the basis of a warrant issued by Woburn court for failing to appear on a summons. Monday evening Officer Steve Mauriello arrested Terry Lee Conway of Elm Avenue, Maple Lake, Minnesota, charging him with operating after revocation of his license. He was bailed for a Tuesday court appearance.

Open house at Harnden Tavern

The Wilmington Historical Commission and the Friends of the Harnden Tavern would like to remind the townsfolk that the Colonel Joshua Harnden Tavern is open to the public, free of charge, on the first Sunday of each month from 2 to 4 p.m.

The tavern is located in North Wilmington on Route 62 at the corner of Woburn Street.

A member of the Historical Commission will be pleased to explain the history of the Harnden Tavern to all who visit.

The next open house will be Sunday, June 7 from 2 to 4 p.m. easements shown on the original plan stand. The plan, he contended, "governs everything." Hamilton told Langone "It's certainly not a decision I feel the board should make." She said she would check with Town Counsel Alan Altman to see if he has a preference whether to continue with the present custom or follow other town's leads.

Wilmington senior topics

"Nonsense"

A very enjoyable day was held last Thursday for those seniors who were able to attend the "Nonsense" play at the Shakespeare Theatre. The weather cleared in time to put the finishing touch to a perfect day.

Ceramic class

We hope to start a ceramic class and resume our art and painting class very soon. To keep the ceramic class within our income range, we have asked and received a kiln and several boxes of molds. The maintenance department electrician put new switches on the kiln and installed a 220 plug for us. We have a teacher who would like to start within a month.

If she has a class of 10 persons she will charge only $2.00 a class, more than 10 will be less. The art and painting class will also be the same, and depending on the number in the class she will charge accordingly. These classes are very popular in most senior centers throughout the country. Have you ever seen a work of art accomplished by painting or ceramic and wished you could do that? It is easy once you start.

Dogs in pound

The Wilmington dog officer is presently holding the following dogs at the dog pound:

Four puppies, mostly shepherd, two male, two female, picked up April 27 on Patricia Circle.

Female shepherd/collie, picked up April 27 on Patricia Circle.

Male German shepherd, black & cream, choke collar with clip, found May 2 at Wilmington Shell.

Dogs held longer than ten days are available for adoption. For adoption information, call 658-7845.

Think of the beautiful gifts you can make, in either class, as Christmas, birthday or wedding gifts for friends or relatives. If you were to take these classes on your own, you know you would be paying a lot more for them. If interested call the center and sign up. As soon as we get 10 seniors we will start the classes.

May social

If you have not signed up for the May therapeutic social at Yoken's Restaurant in Portsmouth, N.H., you will have to do soon or your name will have to be placed on a waiting list. We will be using coaches on this social with lavatories. This is in answer to those who have asked us. We understand it is difficult for many seniors to travel a long distance in school buses. A $3.00 non-refundable deposit will be requested and your selection of meat or fish when signing up.

Whist party

Next Monday, May 11th, the first whist party of May will be held in the function room starting at 1 p.m.

Get back in shape

Now that the terrible winter we had this year is behind us and spring has sprung - it is time to get our bodies back in shape. We have several organized exercise programs to help you accomplish this. Monday and Wednesday mornings from 10 to 11 our very active exercise class is held in the function room. The walk program under the direction of Ed Curtis is held Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning, leaving the center parking lot at 9. Ed has selected many excellent walking trails that are not only interesting but scenic.

Swimming every Wednesday morning from 10 to 11 at Shawsheen Tech is also good exercise. Bowling at the Candlepin Lanes in North Reading every Wednesday afternoon starts at 1. You can join all these exercise classes if you have been involved in physical exercise of some sort throughout the year, but if you are a beginner it would be wise to select one and work up to the rest.

Medicaid/Medicare benefits

In 1984 Congress had inadvertently made approximately 5700 widows and widowers of Social Security beneficiaries ineligible for Medicaid by increasing their Social Security benefits. The increase pushed many over the maximum income level by only a few dollars. Many of these elderly beneficiaries had high medical cost for prescription drugs and oxygen which Medicare does not cover. Earlier this year Congress passed legislation to deem these individuals eligible again for Medicaid. If you are one of these persons and have not been notified, call the Cambridge/Somerville Elderly Legal Service, tel. number.

Crossing the Atlantic with 8800 tons of ammo -- and no escort

Copyright © 1987
by Capt. Larz Neilson

World War II convoys were always interesting. The American convoys which left New York to cross the Atlantic were generally composed of 13 columns of ships, five ships to a column. The commodore (commanding officer) was generally in the first ship of the seventh column.

It was he who gave all the orders having to do with the navigation of the convoy, directions for speed, positions, etc. The signals were made by flag, with each ship repeating the signal, a somewhat colorful but necessary task. The captains of the various ships would be notified daily of the noon time position the convoy would be in for the following two days. This was in case a ship should be separated from the convoy.

Every captain also had an envelope, sealed. That told the place where he was to go, if he was separated from the convoy.

A commodore never headed for the place where he was going if he could help it. Scouting enemy submarines might be watching. They could send radio reports on the directions being steered. From those messages the enemy could gather "wolf packs" to attack the convoy.

Sometimes, too, a commodore had to order a course (direction to be steered) which was at right angles to the winds and waves. Sailors would say the ship was in a "beam sea." Beam seas could cause a ship to roll.

Most of the freighters had, during the war, an extra 1500 tons at the bottom of the ship - 1500 tons of sand. That was a safety measure. If the ship were to be torpedoed, it would remain upright while it was sinking. The crew would then be able to successfully launch the lifeboats.

But that 1500 tons of sand made the ships act like the kewpie dolls one can sometimes see at a church fair - the dolls with a round bottom which roll and roll and roll. Children sometimes call such dolls "roly-polys."

A sailor would call a "roly-poly" ship "stiff." It was not pleasant to sail in a stiff ship. With thousands of tons of cargo, it would "jerk" across the ocean, rolling from one side to the other in, say, two seconds.

Tankers, that is, oil carriers, on the other hand, never had that extra 1500 tons of sand at the bottom. It is not good practice to mix oil (or gasoline) with sand. A tanker was never "stiff." It rolled easily, in practically any kind of weather.

A convoy which left New York in early January, 1943 had over 50 cargo ships. The commodore was in a tanker.

The cargo ships were "stiff." The tanker was not.

The commodore steered south-east, after the convoy had left New York, to make scouting submarines think it was bound for (say) South Africa. Two days out, when the convoy was down to the latitudes of the Bahama Islands, it was turned to steer to the northeast.

Scouting submarines, if they saw that convoy, might then guess it was on its way to English ports. Actually it was going to the Mediterranean - through the straits of Gibraltar.

The wind and the seas were from the northwest - on the beam, as a sailor would say.

That was no problem for the commodore. But the 50 plus cargo ships, all being "stiff" with that 1500 tons of sand, were taking brutal punishment in a northwest gale.

One of those ships was the Daniel Boone, a Liberty ship. In addition to carrying regular cargo she had 8800 tons of explosives, and, on deck, two locomotives, each weighing 300 tons. In seamen's terms she was an "ammo ship."

Ammo ships did not sink when they were torpedoed. They blew up - into smithereens. No one lived to tell the tale.

Many of the captains in that convoy protested, that first day on the northeast course. They told the commodore they could not remain on the course. The commodore hoisted a general signal saying that the course would be maintained.

The cargo ships were taking brutal punishment. About the time of sunset some on the ships were "pulled out" of the convoy, by the captains.

The Daniel Boone continued. But, about 10 p.m. the captain could see that one of the locomotives was starting to move. The heavy chains and turnbuckles were loosening up.

He had to call the seaman out to secure the locomotive. But, because of the waves piling over the main deck, the captain had to change his course - in other words he had to pull out of the convoy. The crew was then called, to tighten up the turnbuckles.

That locomotive could have smashed the ship, or peeled the deck off, in the manner of opening a sardine can, if the turnbuckles had not been tightened.

The work having been completed, the captain steered for the position where the Daniel Boone would have been, if it had not left the convoy. There were no ships to be seen at that position.

The convoy was not there. All night long at full speed the Daniel Boone was zigged back and forth across the projected route of the convoy. It was not sighted.

The Daniel Boone was at the stipulated noon position on the second day. The convoy was not to be seen. It was time to open the secret orders.

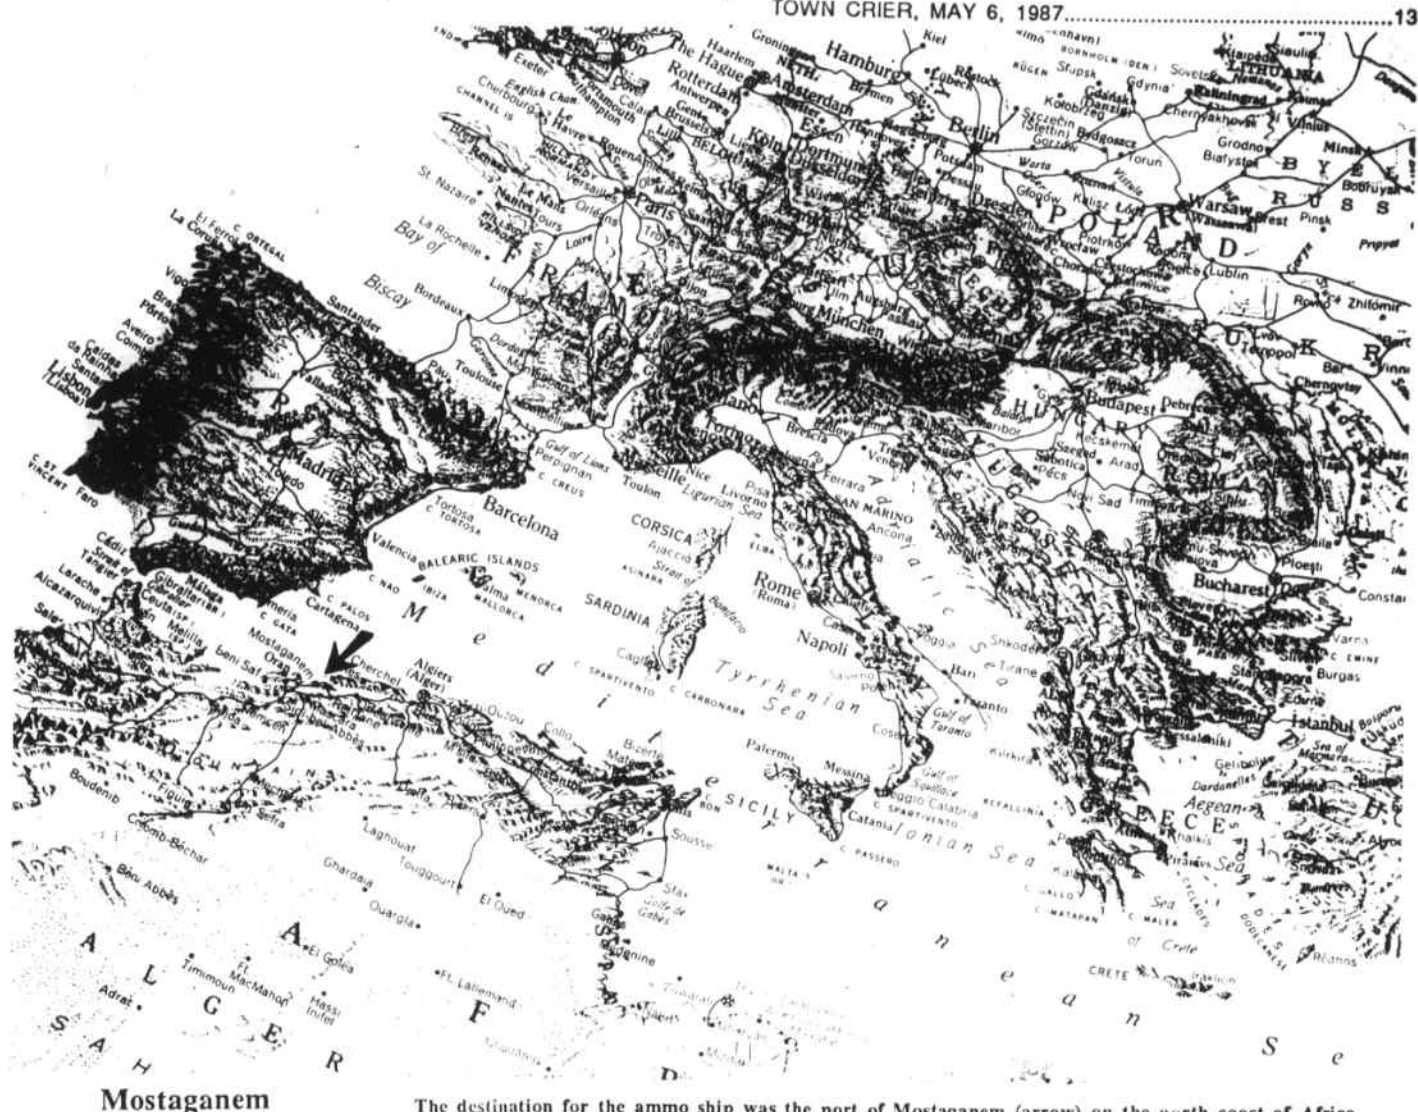

The destination was Casablanca, on the northwest coast of Africa.

The captain chose a course which would lead him to a point 30 miles south of Santa Maria, the southernmost of the Azores islands. He set off at full speed.

One or more hundred miles to the west the convoy ships began to send out SOS. Submarines were torpedoing ships of that particular convoy. Thirteen ships reported having been torpedoed. The captain plotted their positions. All were to the west of the Daniel Boone. The reports, of course, came from the ship's radio operator.

He, like the signalman on the ship had orders that all messages were for the captain, and could be given to the Officer of the Watch, but to no one else. He, too, was the only person who knew exactly where the ship was, other than the captain and the Officers of the Watch.

But, at 2 a.m. a few days later the

Mostaganem

The destination for the ammo ship was the port of Mostaganem (arrow) on the north coast of Africa.

captain looked down from the bridge, to see stewards and waiters starting to launch a lifeboat. The ship was 30 miles south of Santa Maria. Those crew members quite evidently felt they could row those 30 miles. They did not realize that to attempt the launching of a lifeboat without stopping the ship was suicide.

"Go back to your rooms or I'll turn the lights on!" were the words from the bridge. The would-be lifeboat crew members disappeared.

Five days later the ship arrived at Casablanca. A destroyer from the (British) Royal Navy came out, and escorted the Daniel Boone 200 miles, to Gibraltar.

Several days were spent at anchor, in the International waters, off that British fortress. A ship loaded with ammo, in those waters, was still a target.

Five miles away, to the west, was a Spanish port, called Algiercirus. In that port was an Italian ship, part of the Italian Navy. It had an underwater "entrance" from which small submarines could go, and return.

Italian divers would take those small subs over to the ships, and attach explosive devices. Some ships had been sunk.

Messengers from the British (Royal) Navy brought anti-personnel grenades to every ship at anchor. "Throw one overboard every two or three hours," was the order.

With more than 100 ships in the area there were explosions every few minutes - enough to discourage any attempt at blowing up Allied ships.

Another kind of visitor showed up in daylight - Spanish bumboats. A bumboat is a small craft, manned by a native or two, from which fruit or liquor is sold to the sailors on ships at anchor.

Of course a bumboat might have explosives too. The captain decided that no "bumboats" should be allowed near the Daniel Boone.

The Second Mate, a young man named Cates, (a relative of the late Howard Cates of Wilmington) took up the guard, from the poop deck. He was armed with a .3030 rifle, and if any bumboat came near Cates would fire a bullet into the water, near that bumboat.

(Cates, incidentally, had made the "Murmansk" run a year previously. Only he and the captain survived, from a torpedo attack by two planes at the same time.)

After a day or so the Daniel Boone joined a convoy into the Mediterranean, and went to Oran, on the coast of North Africa (Algeria). There the locomotives were taken off.

The Daniel Boone then went on to Mostaganem, a port of about the size of Gloucester, about 80 miles east of Oran. There the munitions were to be unloaded.

Mostaganem was a city of perhaps 25,000, mostly native Arab. There were a few French. Twenty five miles to the south, near the beginnings of the desert, were French army posts. No one seemed to know English. The captain seemed to be the only person around who spoke both French and English.

For the natives the Daniel Boone was not particularly to be welcomed, even if they were being paid to work on it. It was a shipload of munitions, a visitor that might blow up.

And, a few hundred miles to the east American and German troops were joined in battle.

On the fourth night a corvette, (Continued on Page 14) flying the flag of the Royal (i.e. British) Navy tied up to the Boone. The Boone's captain was invited aboard, for a social.

Once a month in the Royal Navy a bottle of liquor was issued, sort of a ration, to each officer aboard. This was the night. Every officer was sitting in the wardroom, bottle in hand, looking for a partner with whom to socialize.

About 1 a.m. a corporal, US Army, came galloping aboard. He saluted the commanding officer of the Corvette. "Sir, there's a yellow on!" (Enemy airplane warning - the writer has forgotten whether within five minutes or fifteen minutes flying time).

The commanding officer pushed a button. The Officer of the Deck appeared.
"All the lights on deck are out?" "Yes Sir!" "And all out on the Boone?" "Yes Sir!" "Carry on!"

The captain of the Boone asked if they weren't even to go on deck to look at those planes?
"Oh no. If we went on deck we might be tempted to man the guns. And if we manned the guns we might be tempted to fire them! And if we fired at them we bloody well wouldn't hit them!"

So everyone returned to the serious business at hand in that wardroom. The Italian planes never got within five miles of Mostaganem. The bombs were dropped offshore, and the plane or planes returned to Italy.

Next morning, so the story was, Rome Radio was broadcasting how Mostaganem had been bombed, and how a ship in the harbor had been left ablaze.

Of course that wasn't true. If the Boone had been hit it would not have been only burning.

But it took the French Army three days to collect all the workers of Mostaganem, and returned them home. When they heard that an Italian plane or planes were offshore the natives all headed for the desert.

That was three days that the Boone did not unload much cargo.

Eventually the ammunition was off the ship. The ship went to another port, called Beni-Saf, and loaded iron ore. Then it returned to the United States.

And, on the way home, no crew members tried to launch a lifeboat at 2 a.m.

Outdoors column

by Bill Conlon

While the use of artificial lures has become the standard for fishing in North America, there's still an awful lot to be said for natural bait. And the first rule of natural bait is finding it.

The standard, no-frills live bait is the basic worm. Everybody, no matter how rich and famous, learns how to fish by threading worms on a hook. When you think worms, in fact, you always think of fishing.

The prime reason behind the continuing success of worms is because they work. Just about every fish in fresh water is willing to make a meal of a well-presented worm. Okay, why? How do worms (which live in soil) make their way to the fish (which don't)? Simple.

Rivers and streams are the reason why worms meet fish, and vice versa. When rushing water washes away the riverbanks, worms fall into the drink, pure and simple. While trout fishing, in fact, worms will frequently produce more fish than any other method.

In lakes and ponds, however, worms are not the most effective thing to use fishing. Simply put, there aren't many worms washing in from the feeder streams, so the fish just don't get much chance to see them.

Kibbies (sunfish and bluegills) will eat most anything. Grubs, bugs and anything in the shallows are all fair game for kibbies. Worms, if you notice, catch mostly kibbies. Bass and pickerel are more interested in shiners and little fish, leaving worms in the lurch. Sorry to say it, but worms will rarely catch a bass or pickerel worth bragging about.

Catfish, on the other hand, are always on the lookout for worms. A gob of nightcrawlers on the bottom will consistently produce horned pout and other cats.

As for catching worms, there are a number of methods. The easiest by far is to simply take a walk after a heavy rain. Worms aplenty will be crawling all over the sidewalk, trying to escape their water-filled tunnels. Just bring a can along.

The most common method of gathering worms, naturally, is to get out there and dig. Just get out there with a shovel and start digging, but not on the lawn or in Mom's garden. The spade will turn up mostly small garden worms, along with an occasional nightcrawler. (If all my worm digging had been done in one location, I surely could have tilled all the farmland in Kansas by now.)

The way to catch just nightcrawlers, however, it go crawling around at night. If your lawn has evidence of worm holes, simply water the lawn heavily, then wait until dark. Your bait awaits...

After sunset, nightcrawlers come half-way out of their burrows, especially if the grass is wet. If you're quick enough, you can pin them with one hand and slowly pull the crawlers out of their tunnels, but you have to be fast as lightning to stop them. Nightcrawlers can escape underground in less than the blink of an eye. (By the way, don't go nightcrawler-hunting in the neighbor's yard without asking permission first. The police don't take kindly to people sneaking around after dark with flashlights.)

My favorite way to catch worms, though, is right on the spot. Whenever I go trout fishing, I just bring the hooks -- the worms will be waiting for me. By turning over rocks and logs near the stream, I can usually catch enough worms (mostly small ones) to keep me fishing all afternoon.

There are other kinds of bait, but nothing beats worms for all around good fishing. It's the old-standby.

In future columns I'll discuss a few of the other baits you can catch, all of them free.

In fact, I might even reveal my super secret fishing bait, one that's guaranteed to take fish every time, never fail. It's live bait, it's free, and it's available everywhere, but you probably never gave a thought to using it. But for right now, it's still a secret. (Tell you later...)

— Tackle Box —

The Club Fleur-de-Lis fishing derby went off as planned last weekend, with 118 anglers heading out onto Long Pond in Tyngsboro. The day was mostly cloudy and cool, and the wind never let up for more than a few seconds.

The fishing, however, was not much better than the weather.

Only two pickers were brought to the weigh-in table, in contrast to the ice fishing tournaments on Long Pond, when the pickerel dominated. Doug Gray of Pepperell took the $100 first place and Keith Regan of Lowell took the $75 second, both with chainides weighing under one pound each.

The bass were likewise scarce, but Arthur St. John of Lowell brought in a largemouth weighing 2-pounds-12 in the last few minutes to take the $100 top prize. Second place and $75 went to Fred Lucier of Nashua for a 1-pound-8 fish and Billy Riggs of Lowell took $25 of a bass weighing one pound even. Arthur's bass will be mounted free by Wilder Taxidermy of North Chelmsford.

In the off-species category, John Fallon of Tewksbury took $100 for an eel weighing 1-pound-8. John's eel was going to be the fish mounted for free, until Arthur came up with his bass. (An eel might have made an odd-looking wall display.) Second and third places were both horned pout, with

Russ Lord and Dave Lord of Lowell, taking 1-pound-3 catfish, respectively. (Russ's was longer and broke the tie.)

A three-ounce bonus was added to the weight of all fish returned alive to the pond, and there were (thankfully) no fish seen nailed to the board, as was done in the past at Club Fleur-de-Lis derbies.

In other news, the upcoming Silver Lake clean-up in Wilmington will be discussed next Wednesday night. Baystate Environmental Consultants, Inc., will be holding a meeting in Wilmington Town Hall on May 13 at 7:30 to discuss the clean-up.

Also, the Greater Lowell Fly Fishers have scheduled their annual open water fishing tournament on the Merrimack River for June 27 and 28. More details later.

The Lowell Fly Fishers, by the way, is interested in a lot more than just fly fishing. Monthly derbies for members-only are scheduled from now until October. The club, which recently accepted 16 new members, will meet on Monday night at 8 in the Dracut Middle School, just behind the high school on Lakeview Avenue. Those interested in joining may call Lenny Mills at 251-4530 for more info.

Complete game
winner for TMHS

Tewksbury High School righthander Peter Frend was in complete control in Merrimack Valley Conference baseball action Monday afternoon, pitching a complete game four-hit 3-0 shutout over the Wilmington Wildcats. Peter struckout eight batters and walked only four in hurling the Redmen to their second MVC victory of the season.

Freshmen baseball

Parr fires two-hitter

Wildcat freshman Andy Parr picked up his first win of the season by pitching a two-hitter against Lawrence last Monday. Parr struck out six and walked only three enroute to the 4-1 win.

The Wildcats struck first in the first inning, as Steve Murray singled and later scored on a two out double by Chris Allen (two for three with two doubles).

Wilmington scored again in the second when John McGrath reached on an error, Mike Dunn singled and Joe Spencer singled making the score, 3-0.

The Cats finished their scoring when Joe Vieira belted a homerun over the centerfield fence in the top of the sixth inning.

The scoring for Lawrence came in the last of the sixth as the lead-off hitter reached on an error and later scored on Lawrence's second hit of the game.

Defensively, the Wildcats turned three double plays to help Parr to the victory. Spencer started one in the fourth, McGrath in the sixth and Rich Whitney started a game saving DP in the seventh inning.

Wilmington wasn't as lucky Friday, as Andover beat the Wildcats, 13-0. The whitewashing was the second loss of the year against three wins for the JV's.

Jason Bere (now 2-1) picked up the loss, going three innings and allowing eight runs on eight hits. Joe Vieira finished the game, allowing only two runs on four hits.

Offensively for Wilmington, Murray, Allen, Bere, Vieira and Glen Hooper all had one hit apiece.

This week the Wildcats travel to Tewksbury on Monday, on Tuesday they are at home for a makeup game with Methuen (from last Wednesday), Wednesday the Cats are at home vs Billerica and Friday they travel to Greater Lawrence.

For those of you who would like to support Wildcat baseball the varsity plays the same schedule as the JV's and play their home games at the North Intermediate, while the junior varsity plays at the Woburn Street School.

Summer basketball

The sixth annual North Reading Basketball Camp will be held at North Reading High School July 20-24. The camp is for boys entering grades six through 10.

Directing the camp will again be North Reading coach Barry Kipnes. Other members of the staff are Rich Butterworth of Hamilton-Wenham, Joe Casey of Masconomet, John Doherty of North Reading, Paul Finn of Newburyport, Barry Humphreys of Greater Lowell and Henry McCarthy of Winthrop.

The camp day will run from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Heavy emphasis will be placed on fundamentals and all areas of individual play will be covered.

The program of instruction includes drill stations, instructional video tapes, lectures and controlled scrimmages. Games will be played every day, with each camper playing an equal amount of time.

In the past five years campers have attended from 24 different communities. Many former campers have played on their freshmen, junior varsity and varsity teams. Enrollment is limited in order to allow for maximum attention to each camper.

Each camper receives a camp t-shirt, certificate of attendance, fundamentals handbook, camp notebook and coach's evaluation.

For a brochure or more information, call Barry Kipnes at 664-2471 or write to Barry Kipnes, B-1 Colonial Drive, Andover, MA 01810.

Perfect sacrifice

Tewksbury High School's Amy DiRocco drops down a perfect sacrifice bunt early in Monday afternoon's 12-3 TMHS pounding of Lowell.

Tight defense

Tewksbury's infield defense was solid in a 12-3 win over Lowell Monday afternoon. Laurie Zotto pitched the win for the Redmen, while Leanne Babine was the hitting star. In other action Monday, Wilmington topped Billerica, 8-4 behind the complete game pitching of Leigh Hastings and a balanced attack.

Cardell had four strikeouts, eight hits and three walks.

Chris McMillan had seven strikeouts, four hits and seven walks.

A's 8 Tigers 3

The A's went 2-0 behind a three hit effort from Keith Sandberg and Steve Killelea. Steve also accounted for five runs with a hard single in the first inning and a towering sacrifice fly in the fourth. Jay Shadde tore up the basepaths with five stolen bases on two walks. Anthony Grassia had an important two run sacrifice in the fifth inning to ice the game.

Bob Fleming and George Melitese pitched an impressive game and will get stronger as the season goes along. Always dangerous "Bim" Edmonds was walked intentionally in the fourth to load the bases and get the force out on the next batter.

Eric Hazelton was impressive at the plate, having lined hard to Kevin Barrett in first inning and singled into the gap in right in the fourth and scored after squeezing a walk in seventh inning.

A's 6 Royals 2

The first game of 1987 Senior League season was played in cold and windy weather. The A's pitcher Keith Sandberg and Brian Oxman were very hot and threw a one hit, seven strikeout game at the Royals at the North Intermediate.

Jim Phillips was the only Royal to get a hit when he stroked a double into the gap in rightfield.

Kevin Field started on the mound for the Royals and did a great job through three innings (two hits, one run, six strikeouts) when he ran into a bit of wildness and walked the bases full. Mark LaCava was next man up and doubled to start the big four run inning that eventually won it for the A's.

Twins 13, Royals 1

The senior league Twins opened their season with a win Saturday afternoon over the Royals.

A strong seven innings of pitching was put in by Phil Fenton. Fenton struck out ten, walked eight and allowed only one hit by the Royals. Chris Clark, Brian McDonald and Mike Morris had solid singles, while Kevin O'Hearn had the only extra-base hit of the game.

Mike Burns, Brian Gillis, Scott Tuxbury, Brett Hicks, Derrick Stokes, Chris Clark and Scott Crowley all crossed the plate for the Twins. Brian McDonald, Mike Morris and Phil Fenton scored twice each.

The losing pitcher for the Royals was Jim Russo. Final score was Twins 13, Royals 1.

This is the kind of story you only see on television sitcoms like "The Dick Van Dyke Show." In fact, a similar story was the plot of one of those terrifically funny Dick Van Dyke shows.

The story you readers are about to hear is true, however, and not the figment of a tv script writer's imagination. The main character in this story is a young fellow from our area by the name of Richard Collins. This columnist met Richard at the Registry of Motor Vehicles, where we were both standing in line waiting to register new cars. On this occasion we had to wait in a long line, which gave us ample time to get to know each other pretty well. If there is anything good to be said about standing in long lines, it is that you get to make a lot of friends fairly quickly.

Richard's story unfolded this way: "I was driving this old, beat-up Chevy, and I decided it was time to finally break down and buy a new car. I knew I wasn't going to get anything for my old car as a trade-in, so I left it in my yard with a 'for sale' sign on the window, figuring somebody, maybe a young kid, who's handy with cars would pick it up. In the meantime, though, I left the car registered and insured, so that I could drive it around until my new car was on the road."

One day, as Richard was leaving work at a local computer company, he noticed that the license plate on the back of his car was missing. "I couldn't understand how the plate could disappear like that," he continued. "Then I took a close look at the license plate holder, and noticed how rusted out the thing was, then realized that it could

He's just not your average guy next door

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

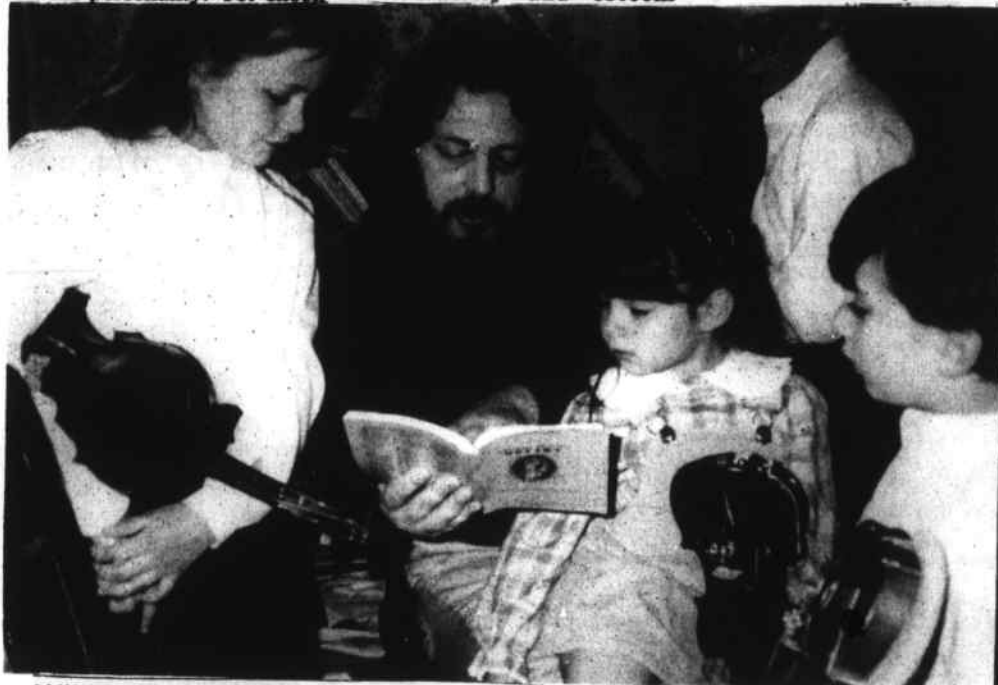

He's just not your average guy and doesn't even try to be. Pick up a copy of the "New York Times," "Village Voice," or "Boston Globe" and you're likely to find an article about him, William Thomas McKinley; his work his talents, and his personality. Yet check out a local restaurant and you're just as likely to see him, 'Tom' McKinley; beard, suspenders, cigarette, contagious laugh; at breakfast with his wife after a night of composing. The McKinley family has lived in relative anonymity in Reading for 14 years while the McKinley name has grown in celebrity and esteem throughout the country and abroad.

Born in 1938 near Pittsburgh, McKinley has been called an "orchestrating wizard" and is one of the most highly respected, exciting and prolific contemporary-classical composers in the world, having

He's just not you average guy next door

written more than 200 classical pieces and jazz arrangements. The recipient of numerous honors and grants from a Guggenheim Fellowship to an award from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters, he is the only artist who has ever received three awards from the Massachusetts Council for the Arts. He has been commissioned and performed by symphony orchestras and soloists across the country, in South America and Europe. Known for his productivity, he also has an increasing catalog of recordings.

Can he possibly be attuned to the real world, this artist whose work has been performed by John Williams on opening night at Pops and who is often compared to Mozart, Brahms and Ravel? With wife Marlene, a medievalist at Suffolk University; five children, the youngest a senior at Reading High; and one car; he's very much in touch with reality - although he's certainly thought about how to improve it.

"I think that most activities in society could be run by machines," he says, "and let people free up their leisure. That's my idea of a utopia - where the newspaper is delivered by a robot and that newspaper-delivery kid can go study violin. If we could eliminate all menial tasks through our technology instead of making technology eliminate people, that would be the ideal. It would be great to have more leisure - you notice that newspapers throughout the country always have an arts and 'leisure' page. Leisure time is freedom, and that makes creativity possible."

Not that McKinley knows the meaning of such leisure. Just this year, he has traveled to premieres of his work in New York at Carnegie Hall, Los Angeles at the Hollywood Bowl, Providence, Denver, Chicago, Germany, Holland - and, of course, Boston at Symphony Hall. A faculty member at the New England Conservatory of Music, he teaches both composition and jazz. Whenever he is at home, he composes, often throughout the night. And he also performs in a jazz trio on the north shore.

"I think the problem with wasted youth - and I mean that period between high school and limbo," he continues, "is that if you don't go on to college or have a real goal in mind, you end up working in the most mundane circumstances. You don't need somebody to serve McDonald's hamburgers downtown. Little mechanical arms could bring you those burgers."

On the other hand, when it comes to technology and music, he says, "Computer music is in various stages. The basic help that the computer is giving us now is in terms of shortcutting the process of copying, notation, and things like that. As far as a separate genre of music, it's kind of gotten stalled. It probably won't be much in future years, and I'm glad. It seems like society doesn't want it."

William Thomas McKinley offers advice to Sean O'Hare of the Creative Arts for Kids program.

"Computers can do the things we can't," he continues. "That's what I want them for, not to replace the things we can do - like creating music. I think the great tradition of performance and human interaction in music which a group of creative kids typifies - that's what we want to preserve. If we start replacing violins with computers that sound like violins, what's going to happen to the people? It would be nice if every young person were involved in making a better society through creative work, whether it be in music or inventing a new machine or all the things we need done to cure us from disease."

McKinley speaks passionately about the role of education in American life and in the utopia of which he dreams. "I love athletics. I like sports. I love baseball so much - I once pitched a one-hitter in a semi-pro minor league game. However... I really believe that the prevalence of some of the competitive sports in high school places too much emphasis on winning and losing. Although competition can be very good, the arts get neglected."

"There wouldn't be a problem if there were a balance between athletics and the arts," he continues, "but to choose athletics over the arts is just sinful. It stresses the fact that you can get what you want if you beat on somebody, that you couldn't get it by being cultured or dignified. You can't fight with a violin in your hand."

"The ideal school system is platonic," the classical McKinley states. "If we'd only follow the old masters, we'd have reading, writing and music. In a way, the old system of education was better than it is today, simpler and more democratic. Today music gets shuffled aside - although the status of the musician in society has been improving."

The contemporary McKinley is equally intense. "I'm a patriot and I believe that America is founded on individual ideals. It is not a collective bunch of 'whatever.' Individual ideals made the country great and still keep the country great. We have the best musicians and the best performers in the world right here in this country. Now we need to pass this on to the children and we need a lot of help, encouragement and money to keep it going."

Although he loves and refers constantly to the "little kids" (tots to teens) and wishes he could do more with them, he is "not qualified." He feels that the fact that a recognized expert is not allowed to work in the public schools is symptomatic of a deep wound in the American system of education. "I think we want to keep the kids down," he says. "We say we want to educate them for kind of fluff reasons but when someone who's really good comes into a high school and works with the kids, he or she doesn't last long. I've seen this over and over and it makes me wonder sometimes about the teachers who do stay. I've been trying to change the system for more than 30 years. I know I'll have the last laugh - it's only a matter of when. It takes a long time to get the last laugh."

He has a lot to say about the classic and about the contemporary, and speaks about much more than music when he says, "We need more training - and this goes for all the arts - in the modern, especially at the college level. Much of arts education is aimed at the classics - to put it simply, the study of that which is dead. And I think what's important for young people is that they get that which is living around them today, the guy next door who's a great writer or carpenter or whatever profession he happens to be. We tend to ignore ourselves in this educational process and develop a disdain for the contemporary. Kids need a lot of exposure to modern music including all forms of jazz and rock as well as Mozart and Beethoven. There should be no barriers."

In McKinley's mind "music" is synonymous with education. "I would like to see the training of music for children become - because not every one of them will be a professional - a spiritual education which would teach them to choose and think and feel for themselves as they mature, create the sense of independence and free spirit that's made the country what it is. You can't look at a bunch of kids and say 'well, this kid's going to be an Isaac Stern' but they need to have this kind of program if there's any chance of ever finding out. If they show exceptional talents along the way, they can be nurtured further. Little kids are very educable, starving to learn, and music and the arts are a great vehicle for that. It's not just learning how to play the violin. It's learning how to conduct your life by playing the violin which I think is really important."

"Art has the potential to make people kind, to make them do less harm to their fellow persons," he continues, "to provide the kids with a path to freedom so they can choose their own destinies. What more can we ask? Maybe a percentage of the children exposed to the arts will be great, super musicians and stars. That would be the icing on the cake."

This concern for young people will be evident on May 15th when he will perform with and for the more than 100 area youngsters of all ages involved in the Reading-based Creative Arts for Kids music program. "The Creative Arts Kids Meet William Thomas McKinley 10th Anniversary Celebration" will take place at 7:30 p.m. at Reading Memorial High School with Gary LaPierre as host. For ticket information, please contact the CAK office at 942-0538.

TIDBITS

A layer of soil no thicker than the width of a dime, spread across an acre of farmland, weighs about five tons, says National Wildlife magazine. That's all the amount of soil most American farmlands are able to replace, naturally.

Soil erosion is not only bad for farmers, it's bad for wildlife too, reports National Wildlife magazine. Researchers in Missouri found that 90 percent of the deer living atop fertile soils gave birth to twins, compared to only 40 percent of the deer living in more eroded areas of Missouri.

ON YOUR FEET HEEL PAIN

Heel pain is a common problem that affects both men and women and is usually associated with prolonged standing or walking on hard surfaces.

The most common diagnosis for the origin of heel pain is that of a heel spur. Interestingly though, the heel spur, which is visible on X-Ray, is not often the source of the pain. More often, it is the ligament that attaches to the spur that is the source of the pain.

Prolonged standing or walking on hard surfaces such as wood or cement will cause the muscles of the leg that support the foot to become tired. When that happens, the arch of the foot "falls" and the big ligament on the bottom of the foot becomes strained. The strained ligament can either become irritated in the middle, causing arch pain or it can pull little bits of bone skin off the heel bone causing pain and inflammation. Over time, the small bits of bone skin pulled away, form a spur.

Treatment includes, dealing with the inflammation and the use of arch supports. Rarely is surgery required.

WOMEN'S NETWORK LUNCHEON

The Middlesex Community College Women's Network will hold a luncheon meeting at the Lord Bedford Motor Inn, Great Road, Bedford on Thursday, May 14 from 11:45 a.m. to 2 p.m.

This meeting marks the Eighth Anniversary of the Women's Network and will be entirely devoted to networking.

Our focus is on new business developments and practices in the Greater Middlesex East area as well as Eastern Massachusetts. Press releases and notices are welcome. Please send to this local newspaper, care of William Pacino. We feature a Lexington firm which aids the handicapped with electronic powered wheelchairs that are more versatile and life-quality enhancing.

SMALL BUSINESS WEEK

Small businesses are a major economic force in the United States. Collectively, these enterprises account for half the employment, two-thirds of all new jobs, and 40 percent of the gross national product for the entire nation. Small businesses are also the source of a majority of our major innovations. The accomplishments of the nation's small business owners inspire all of us to face new challenges and open new doors of opportunity.

Each year the President of the United States designates one week in May to acknowledge the efforts and achievements of small business owners because they represent the spirit of the free enterprise system. Small Business Week, 1987 has been scheduled for May 10-16.

COMPUTERIZED POWER WHEELCHAIRS

PERMOBIL of America, Inc. of Lexington, Mass. has announced the introduction of additional models of its electronic power wheelchairs for the handicapped. These wheelchairs, developed and distributed in Sweden and other European countries, are now available in the United States. They provide the latest computer hardware and special software, and can be adapted to a wide range of individual needs. This technology will permit people with disabilities to recover some independence and gain self confidence, along with a better quality of life.

These computerized wheelchairs are more versatile and life quality enhancing than ordinary electric powered wheelchairs because of the use of advanced and tested mechanical and electronic technology. Thousands of these units are in use in Europe.

With these chairs, people can raise or lower themselves to sit at regular desks and tables, and to reach high objects. An optional feature even allows people with severe disabilities to stand upright unaided. Both these features allow people with disabilities to speak with others at eye level.

In addition, there are optional optical links to permit operation of environmental controls (radio, lights, T.V., phone) as well as the ability to operate a personal microcomputer so that the person can communicate, write letters, books, software, and even earn a living.

The chairs are suitable for people with severe spinal injury as well as those with cerebral palsy, muscular dystrophy or

The cost of this meeting and luncheon is $9.00 for members and $12.00 for non-members. For reservations, please call 275-8910, ext. 291 by Monday, May 11.

ANTIQUE VEHICLE MEET

Codman House, an historic museum in Lincoln, Mass. is seeking antique vehicles to participate in a Meet on Sunday, July 19.

All those arriving in an antique vehicle will be admitted free to the day's activities which will include a slide show, old movies, live music, and tours of the museum.

A property of the Society for The Preservation of New England Antiquities, Codman House is located on 16 acres of landscaped grounds. The house, c.1735, is preserved now as it was when the family lived there, complete with original furnishings and personal possessions.

All antique vehicles (1962 and earlier) including cars, trucks, motorcycles, carriages and bicycles are welcome. Individuals as well as clubs are invited to participate. Last year's Meet attracted almost 300 vehicles.

To receive a flyer about the Meet, contact Codman House, P.O. Box 429, Lincoln, Ma. 01773, phone (617) 259-8843.

similar limitations. In addition to permitting the user to recover lost capabilities, the chair will even pay for itself through savings in medical costs, reduced medical complications, and reduced attendant care.

Respiratory difficulties and painful skin conditions normally result if the patient cannot regularly change position without outside assistance. The electronic wheelchair permits patients to change position by themselves by use of controls adapted to the individual's capabilities. And, as the patient gains confidence and experience, there is less need for attendant assistance.

Additional information is available from PERMOBIL of America, Inc., 1644 Massachusetts Avenue, Lexington, Ma. 02173, phone (617) 863-5222.

The courses are part of a 12 course series co-sponsored by the Small Business Development Center, the Salem Chamber of Commerce, North Shore Women in Business, and the Small Business Administration.

HIGHWAY BRIDGE PROJECTS REBOUND

A surge of highway projects in March helped to reverse the recent slide of construction contracting, it was reported recently by the F.W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company.

The latest month's value of total newly started construction rose 10 percent to an annualized rate of $251.0 billion. March's gain followed declines in both January and February.

"The strong rebound of roadbuilding correctly anticipated the passage of the Highway Act early in April," said George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist for F.W. Dodge. "It was too little and too late, however, to bring the first quarter's contracting for total construction equal to that of the previous three months. The shortfall, though small, marked the third consecutive quarterly decline of new construction activity since the industry's peak was reached in the spring of 1986."

In the latest month, contracts for nonresidential building also recovered, although housing activity eased slightly.

BUSINESS DRIVER IMPROVEMENT

Woodchips

ANTHONY MANCONI

Fred Booth read about an employee who works for him at Mass. Electric Co. in Woodchips. His name is Wally Hill, who with his brother Harold (Lefty) Hill served with distinction in the U.S. Marine Corps, in W.W. II. Of course you didn't know that Wally is a hero of the Iwo Jima conflict, serving with the 4th Marine Div. Harold, with the First Marine Div. was wounded on Guadalcanal. Woodchips is proud of you too, Fred Booth of Reading, for your over 44 years of service with the Mass. Electric Co. My friend Dick Hayes works for you days, and some nights fills in as bartender down at the VFW Post. He helps keep the town "half lit."

I love the owners and personnel at Pinewood Garden in North Reading. My neighbor knows that so he asked me to please take a plant there and find out from an expert why it was kind of droopy. I was greeted by Sandy, with a great big smile. (Folks this young lady has personality plus.) "I see that you have a plant from the Begonia family, Woodchipper." I showed a complete ignorance about plants when I said, "No Sandy, it's from the Baratta family of Winchester." Well the plant was taken care of nicely because they sure know their business at Pinewood Garden. I told David Arsenault that I know how to identify a Dogwood Tree. When I was asked, "How," I replied, "by its bark of course." Gee, I hope we're still friends?...

I met three beautiful sisters who are fans of this column, Margaret, Lyn and Barbara Doherty. I hope that they don't enter the same beauty contest, because the judges will find it extremely difficult to chose a winner.

I must admit that I'm no prize package myself. I was asked to pose for a "before" picture in a "before" and "after" magazine ad. You're looking "g-r-e-a-t!" Joe Altavesta, of the Woburn Elks, and also, Bill McGarr, "Stich" Eldridge, Miss Marsi, the waitress, Warren Clement, Joe Tibur, Ed Ward and Leo Boissonault. I thank everyone who bought a "Chilly Willy," from Bob Burns for Easter. It was for a worthy cause. I asked John Nowak if he wanted to contribute something for the old ladies home? "Sure," he said, "take my mother-in-law." "That's not a bit funny," I told him. "My mother-in-law likes me, more than my wife Kathy does." "Why not?" replied Johnny, "look who you took off her hands."

Years ago, many neighbors would "run" over to help you. Today it seems, some of them would just as soon "run" you over if you don't get out of the way quick enough. I said to Louis O'Malley, "you look familiar." "I know it," he replied, "my mother tells me that every time she sees me." Richard Harrington said to me, "I've been married for 25 years and it feels more like 50." If some of you want to join my Aunt Nina's, "Hate the Woodchips Club," after reading this chip, I'll give you her telephone number.

Is your house a "home" or a "museum?" Are all the members of your family allowed to sit in any chair in your living room? Or, are some treated like "mummies," that got a bum wrap? A neighbor of mine is known by various office titles like "super clean," "fussy clean," and "stupid clean!" She is driving her husband Kevin and her five children crazy with her obsession with cleanliness. The rugs are vacuumed every day, all the windows are washed every week and all the walls and ceilings are painted every year. The living room is, of course, "out of bounds," because it's being "saved," and or reserved for "special" company. Baloney! It's far better to have things wear out than rust out. In our house nothing is reserved. Every chair is available to sit in, every floor or rug is there to be walked on and plates, cups and silverware are there to be used. There isn't anything spared, put aside or saved for special people — because folks, there isn't anyone more "special" than the members of your own family. Now, if you want to hate me, go ahead, but I love you all...

Please be very careful and avoid people who tell you that they are going to invest your money like it was "their own." With some of them, it will end up being their money. I'm almost convinced that some of the kids who a generation ago broke all the toys grew up and became elected politicians who went out into the world and "broke it!" I asked Dennis Tully, "Are your parents home?" "They 'was' in but now they 'is' out." "What," I exclaimed, "they 'was' in now they 'is' out — Dennis, where's your Grammar?" "Oh, she's in the kitchen baking an apple pie." George Guyete said to me today, "some people's names appear quite often in Woodchips, tell me, do they pay you?" "No, they don't!" I answered indignantly. "Okay, I'll give you $10 not to have my name in your stupid column." "George, you don't owe me anything."

My wife Kathy tells all the young women if you don't marry for love but marry for money — don't worry because you may end up suffering in comfort. Anne Marie Greene, of Wakefield, has joined Jimmy Geary's Lynnfield Woodchips Fan Club. She works with Jimmy as a computer operator at the Boston Globe. Jimmy said that because of Anne Marie's "Magnetic" personality the computer is specially "insulated." Here are some other new fans, John Barbas, Woburn; Karla Taylor, Winchester; Tony Angelucci, of Russell Farm; Tina Braceland, Burlington; Rita Coyne, Woburn; Arthur and Marie Marino, Stoneham; Peter Sullivan, Woburn High School; Kenny Binding, Winchester; William (Billy) Colella, Winchester; Saul Ziner, Lynnfield; Janice Festa, Lynnfield; Connie Johnson, Honeycorn, Wakefield; "Spike" Boyle and his two handsome sons Brian and Jay; also, Little League Coach Bill Stuke of Woburn; Dr. Russell Carpenter of Winchester; Eddie O'Brien of Watertown; Frank Tuttle of Wilmington and Ed Sargeant of Tewksbury; many more later.

Tommy Cook said that he keeps a picture of his five kids on his desk at work. It's there to remind him that no matter how bad or rough the day will be, it will be a lot worse for his wife Mary when the kids come home from school...The great Gospel singer Edmund McCue started and ended his radio program with this hymn that I love, "If I have wounded any soul today, if I have caused one foot to go astray, if I have walked in my own willful way, Dear Lord, forgive..."

New business in Wakefield

WAKEFIELD — April 11 marked the Grand Opening of Friends Country Store at Depot Square in Wakefield. The shop will carry various lines of quality country accents and furnishings.

The three owners, Donna Martinson of Reading, Suzanne Silveira of Wakefield and Pamela Swallow of Stoneham have entered this venture with a love and respect of all that is Early American — from Amish quilts and painted jelly cupboards to salt-glazed pottery and handwoven baskets. Many hours of planning, researching and seeking out the best quality merchandise has produced a shop unique to the area that will attempt to feature new lines for decorating the country home and provide the customer with a convenient place for choosing the right gift.

As one enters the shop, one cannot help but sense the warm atmosphere of country with the fragrance of hand-dipped candles, potpourri and dried flower arrangements.

The shop has been decorated with custom-curtain treatments, antiques, stencilling-and displays to further enhance the art of decorating through country accents.

Donna and Pamela, both formerly of Fabric Place, have had extensive decorating experience, particularly in window treatments. Suzanne also has a flair for design and is proficient in rug hooking, folk painting and cross stitching, which will also be carried in the store. Pamela has taught cross stitch and other needlework, cut and pierced lampshades, theorem painting, false graining and quilting, while Donna is well experienced in all forms of stencilling and folk painting. All three hope to run courses in the fall depending upon customer interest.

Plans have also been made for guest speakers to lecture on traditional rug hooking, antique samplers and other Early American crafts. The owners want to share, inform and maybe even spark an interest in all the aspects of the various art forms of our own American culture.

How Mother's Day became a state holiday

Though she had no children of her own, Anna M. Jarvis is considered by many to be the unofficial mother of the Mother's Day holiday, according to Hallmark Cards. Mother's Day grew out of the loss Jarvis felt when her mother died in 1905. As she mourned her mother's death, Jarvis decided to establish the second Sunday in May as a memorial to her own mother and to mothers everywhere.

She began her crusade by inviting some friends to her Philadelphia home on the second anniversary of her mother's death, the second Sunday of May, 1907. She shared her plan and expressed her concern that so many adults neglected their mothers. Enthusiasm for the holiday grew steadily. Jarvis persuaded the city fathers in Philadelphia to hold a city-wide Mother's Day observance, and in 1912 at her urging, West Virginia made Mother's Day a state-wide holiday. Oklahoma, Washington, Pennsylvania and other states followed suit. And on May 7, 1914, Representative James Heflin of Alabama and Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas introduced a Congressional resolution to set aside the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day.

Anna Jarvis' crusade was fulfilled May 9, 1914, with President Woodrow Wilson's proclamation, recognizing Mother's Day as a national holiday. Her success was attributed to one of the most effective letter-writing campaigns in history. Jarvis wrote to editors, businessmen, ministers, industrial leaders, congressmen, governors, mayors, clubs and organizations.

Mother's Day became so popular, and so many people requested information about it that Jarvis soon quit her job at an insurance company, and devoted herself full time to making Mother's Day an international celebration.

On Nov. 24, 1948, Anna M. Jarvis, penniless and almost sightless, died in a sanitarium in West Chester, Penn., at the age of 84. She was acclaimed throughout the world for her role as the originator of modern Mother's Day.

Firefighters from Wilmington demonstrate rescue techniques

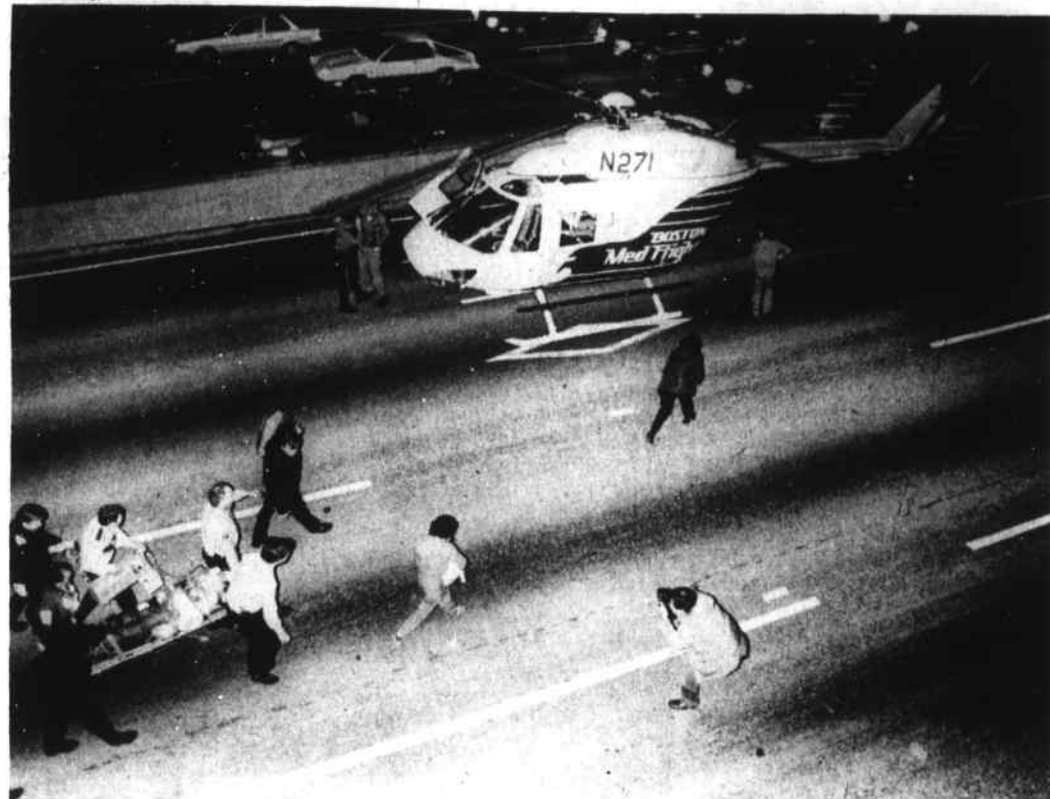

Firefighters from the Town of Wilmington demonstrated their rescue techniques and teamed with the Boston Med Flight helicopter service to produce a safety training video program. Boston Med Flight, a combined service of the major Boston teaching hospitals (University Hospital, New England Medical Center, Massachusetts General Hospital, Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, Boston City Hospital, Brigham and Women's Hospital, Beth Israel Hospital, Children's Hospital) began operating in June, 1985 and has transported over 725 patients. Utilizing a state-of-the-art medically equipped helicopter, staffed with a pilot, a registered nurse and a paramedic, Boston Med Flight has the capability to provide Advanced Life Support care at the scene of an accident, and can fly at 150 miles per hour, significantly improving the victim's chance of surviving. On Saturday, April 14, in a simulated motor vehicle accident in front of the West Intermediate School, members of the Wilmington Fire and Police departments, under the watchful eye of a rolling camera, performed their role in extricating the 26-year-old victim from a car. Because of the extent of the victim's injuries, Boston Med Flight was activated and within seven minutes arrived at the school field. The purpose of this exercise was to demonstrate and capture on film the safety aspects of working in and around helicopters. "In reviewing the training programs we identified a need for this type of training video," Dr. Alasdair Conn, Boston Med Flight Medical Director said. "We have previously worked with the Wilmington Fire Department setting up designated areas within the town suitable for landings, and oriented fire personnel to the helicopter. These steps greatly enhance the safety of utilizing a medevac helicopter." Lieutenant Ed Bradbury of Wilmington Fire was pleased that his department was asked to participate and that the program will train other departments in helicopter safety and use. "Wilmington's actual experience and demonstrated cooperation made filming of this type of program much easier," Mary Hart, Boston Med Flight's Director of Medical Operations stated. "We have flown several victims of motor vehicle accidents, who suffered from multiple traumatic injuries to the Level I Trauma Centers in Boston. The quick evaluation of these injuries and request for the helicopter by the Wilmington Fire Department has played a major role in the patient's outcome." The training video will be available by mid-May and distributed to local Emergency Medical Services providers, complete with a reference guide. Landing zone requirements, preparing a patient, safety around the helicopter and loading are some of the topics covered in the program. The narration was provided by Chet Curtis of WCVB-TV, Needham.

Being there is the best gift!

Being there — in person — for the solemn and joyous occasions of friends and relatives is the ultimate expression of love, according to the May Reader's Digest. It renews friendships and restores both the giver and recipient emotionally and spiritually.

How can we bestow the gift of self? The magazine offers these tips:

Disaster hotline★

A toll-free Disaster Information HOTLINE has been established to provide information about various forms of state and federal assistance available to Massachusetts residents affected by recent flooding.

Massachusetts residents only should call 1-800-992-2051.

The HOTLINE hours of operation are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday. After hours, a recording machine can be used to leave messages.

1. BE POSITIVE ABOUT INVITATIONS — Train yourself to say yes instead of thinking up excuses. Remember that your presence can be a greater gift than anything material that you could send.

2. GO OUT OF YOUR WAY — Manage to be there in spite of the inconvenience of travel, expense or schedule. You'll be surprised at the difference your presence will make.

3. MAKE AMENDS — Sometimes people who miss a key event will feel embarrassed and withdraw from a friendship rather than confront the person. Don't let guilt compound your absence. Pay the friend a call.

For a free reprint of "The Best Gift We Can Give," send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reprint Manager, Dept A-5, Reader's Digest, Box 25, Pleasantville, N.Y. 10570.

MOVIE REVIEWS Rochelle Flynn

"Malone"
84 Charing Cross

Malone Starring Burt Reynolds, Scott Wilson, Kenneth McMillan, Lauren Hutton, Cliff Robertson. Directed by Harley Cokliss. Screenplay by Christopher Frank. Rated R (profanity, violence).

It's absolutely mesmerizing. All consuming, it rivets your attention from the first scene until the closing credits. No, Burt Reynolds' acting ability is not the engrossing attention-getter here. It's his wig.

While it might be considered petty to poke fun at Reynolds' hairpiece, this curly and wind-resistant accessory for the balding actor on the move is about the most interesting thing in his latest flick, Malone. If nothing else, it's the only aspect of the movie that is larger than life.

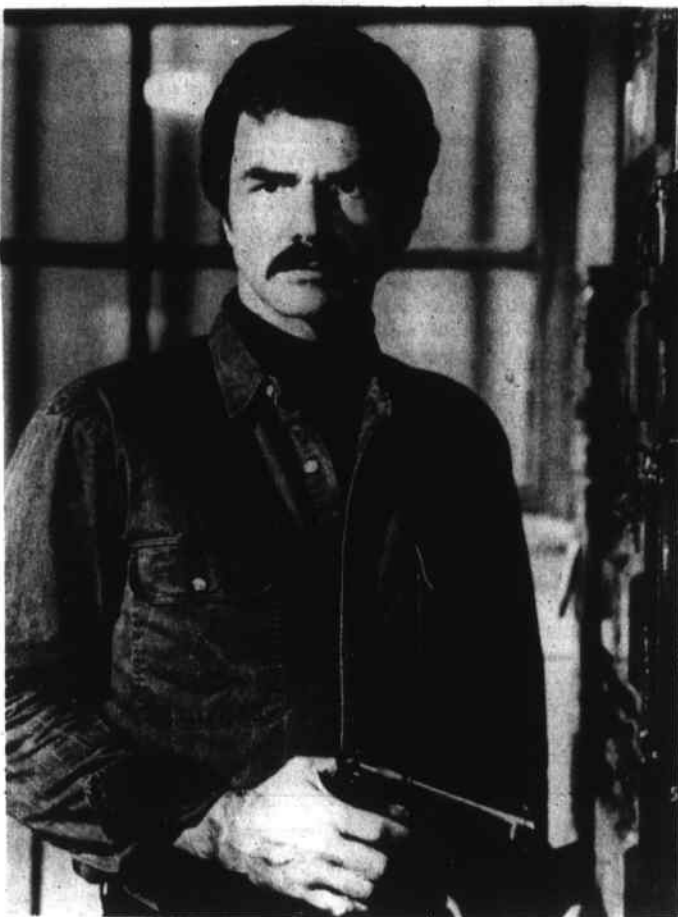

Reynolds, looking bored and worn-out, trudges through this tired tale of a stranger who appears in a dusty Oregon town only to discover that the inhabitants are being terrorized into selling out. It seems a wealthy nutcase wants their picturesque valley to set up a new, vaguely described government peopled with lots of patriotic lunatics like himself. Only somehow, no one in the valley has figured out what is going on. Malone, of course, knows the score two days after he walks into town.

There are a lot of problems with this film, ranging from organic plot flaws to dull, head-on camera shots. But Cliff Robertson as the power-hungry survivalist is one of the worst cases of mis-casting since Richard Gere donned a loin-cloth to play King David. Robertson is a nice guy who pitches for the phone company on TV. He's Kennedy in PT 109 or the retarded Charley. But with his baby-face and nice-guy identification, he is no more believable as a terrorist than Ollie North is as a hero.

While Malone is hardly worth paying to see, it isn't really as aggravating as it is pitiful. Even though he has tried to get away from it, poor Burt has been basically playing the same role for most of his career, and he looks bored to tears. Which, of course, leaves us in pretty much the same state.

84 Charing Cross Road Starring Anne Bancroft and Anthony Hopkins. Directed by David Jones. Screenplay by Hugh Whitmore. Based on the book of the same name by Helen Hanff. Rated PG (profanity).

In 1949 Helen Hanff was a struggling young writer living in New York City who was a confirmed bibliophile and Anglophile, but didn't have the means to sate her passions. So, she responded to an ad in a literary magazine offering reasonably priced books from Marks & Co., a London bookshop. What she ended up with was not only many fine books, but a 20-year relationship with the shop's manager and workers that was carried on only through correspondence.

Hanff never got over to London until her dearest friend in the shop, Frank Doel, had died and the store was closed. But she wrote her lovely story down in a little, 90-page book that became a BBC teleplay, a hit on the London and Broadway stages and a movie starring Bancroft as the now 71-year-old Hanff.

Bancroft, remarkably enough, sounds almost exactly like Hanff, and while she is spirited and slightly eccentric as the book-loving writer, one can't help but feel that she could have pulled back a bit, been slightly less mannered. It doesn't make her character less endearing, just too large for a small story. Hopkins, however, is perfect as the store's manager Frank Doel, a man whose reserved English manner belies a passionate soul.

Because of its literary content, this film is the stuff of which art films are made. But don't let that scare you away. This is really a charming story and quite accessible. If you had never read a book in your life, you would still enjoy the endearing relationship these people share through letters.

Short Takes

Prick up Your Ears is the mesmerizing story of the life and death of playwright Joe Orton, an extremely talented Britisher who was bludgeoned to death in 1967 by his homosexual lover. While it stumbles a few times, the film takes a mature look at their relationship and Orton's incessant quest for clandestine affairs as well as his growing awareness of his own ability. Gary Oldman as Orton is absolutely flawless as he crawls inside the mindset of the charismatic, amusing writer. Rated R. * * * 1/2 schtick that takes us on an opium-hazed jaunt through director Ken Russell's version of Lord Byron's life. Decadent, campy, sometimes wildly funny and completely weird, it's little more than a literary, grade-B horror yarn that is just not for average tastes. Rated R. * *

My Demon Lover has the charismatic Scott Valentine in its favor, but the plot about a cursed derelict who turns into a monster every time he is sexually aroused quickly dissipates into a morose, dull movie. The low-budgeted special effects don't help matters much. Rated PG-13.

Extreme Prejudice is director Walter Hill's sadly inept attempt to bring the western into the '80's. There is a lot of action, a shower of bullets and very little plot. Cliches

Part III Woburn: tales of mystery and mirth

By JIM ROUILLARD

The City of Woburn, mother of so many of the famous and obscure, harbors more than one tale of mystery, mirth, and medical miracle or disaster.

It may have a checkered religious past which reflects only too well the narrow views held by early Puritan divines and members of their congregations.

But the city's literary history has a much broader range.

A review of book titles in the Woburn Public Library yields more than 70 works by Woburn authors.

Among the moderns, the list runs from Edna Boutwell's "Red Rooster," an instant, longtime and considerable success among primary schoolchildren, through a Civil War Diary, edited by Woburn's Leon Basile, and Mary Clifford's "Washington Cookbook," published in 1972.

Earlier works are Longfellow's poem "A Song of Home," set to music for tenor solo, mixed chorus and orchestra, and Leonard Buchanan's "Einstein, by the Man in the Street."

There is also Bryant French's well-regarded study "Mark Twain and the Gilded Age," Parker Converse's particularly vile turn-of-the-century two-volume poem called "The Creation," which tried to deal with the knotty "new" theory of evolution, a 1987 novel, "The Object of My Affection," by Stephen McCauley, and a paper read in 1868 by J.M. Harlow before the Massachusetts Medical Society, "Recovery from the Passage of an Iron Bar through the Head."

In a lighter vein, it is interesting to note that the name of Woburn has been misspelled in at least 300 different ways, according to compilations published by Parker Converse.

Among the more grotesque or amusing: Booburn, Muubborn, Whorebin, Womber, Woman and Wooping.

Converse's "Legends of Woburn, 1642-1892" provides a reasonable abundance of humor and mystery, if you lay aside his too-frequent ventures into verse. The work includes a sardonic reflection on "antient" times and the rigors the early settlers had to undergo.

From his chapter "The Survival of the Fittest:"

"The babies showed the grit their parents had. In winter time these tender little things slept cuddled up in an ice cold chamber, sometimes with snow upon the bed at dawn, and then their little toes were nearly blistered, while just back of the settle where they sat, 'twas almost chill enough to freeze their backs, and yet they seldom whimpered with the cold.

"When Sunday came, according to custom, these week-old shivering babes were taken to a church without a fire, to be baptized, then carried home, perhaps through zero air, to freeze and thaw till Spring gave them relief.

"Judge Sewall was very strict on this point, and of 14 children, lost 11 young; while Cotton Mather, equally severe, saved only two out of 15 ...

"And then 'tis awful in these modern times, to think how these and older ones were dosed ... with nauseous nostrums, made of vilest things, painting with poisons as you'd paint a house, and bleeding, till their veins were nearly empty ... Quicksilver, verdigris and brimstone, mixed with 'barrows grease' the receipt said, was good for horse or man or 'other' beast.

"Alum, copperas, and bayberry wax, with skunk grease, three year's old, made into a paste, was a sovereign cure for rheumatics ...

"Daffy's elixir, minerals for worms, rank poisons, arsenic, calomel, and others, which killed the blood, and made the teeth drop out, blisters of cantharides, poultices made of worms, with opium in its various forms, all conspired to kill them, if they could be killed.

"Wolfs' fangs or rattles of the rattlesnake, were hung in strings around the infant's neck, to make the teeth come quick, and stop the pain; or rabbits' brains boiled soft, and mixed with snails, to annoint the gums and keep the swelling down.

"A frog held in the mouth was good for quinsy (inflammation of the tonsils). A toad squeezed up was good for sweaty hands."

From dwelling on such primitive colonial medicinal measures, Converse skips forward in time — to 1785 and the legend of Woburn's haunted oak. Whether the legend to which Converse alludes is a total tissue of fabrication or a sketch based on experiences which the principals in the affair truly believed, is difficult to judge — but here it is:

The oak in question grew on the bank of "Wright's Pond," now filled in, which, according to Converse, used to be at the junction of New Boston and Beach Streets, before Clinton Street was laid out.

According to public repute, Converse wrote, treasure obtained by "deeds of darkness," had been buried beneath the roots of the oak by some unknown robber who never returned to take it away — and

"here, in the dark and gloomy centre of the old oak," an equally unknown ghost had its haunt:

"One story was that Ichabod Parker, of Reading, the first landlord of the Mishawum House, on or about April 1, 1785, while riding past ... had stopped at the pond to water his horse, but accidentally approaching the spot where the treasure was

Guys and Dolls in North Reading

The North Reading Theatre Workshop's production of "Guys and Dolls" under the direction of Paul D. Greene, opened May 2 and continues through May 8 and 9 at the Daniel H. Shay Auditorium, North Reading High School, Route 62, North Reading. Curtain at 8 p.m. Call the Greene's, 24 Haverhill Street, North Reading at 664-3949 for information about group rates and tickets.

Based on Damon Runyan's "The Idyll of Sarah Brown", "Guys and Dolls" has been a favorite of theatre goers since its opening November 24, 1950 at the 46th Street Theatre, where it ran for 1,200 performances and was revived five years later. Three years after it's New York opening "Guys and Dolls" opened in London and both pleased and puzzled audiences there. Runyan's books had to be supplied with glossaries to enable English readers to follow his rapid fire broadwayese, enriched by such characters as: Nathan Detroit, Sky Masterson, Big Jule, Benny Southstreet, Harry the Horse and Nicely-Nicely Johnson and with such songs as: "A Bushel and A Peck", "If I Were A Bell", "Luck Be A Lady", "Guys and Dolls" was modestly subtitled "A Musical Fable of Broadway."

Part 2 is not only as tasteless as its predecessor, but is nearly the same movie, as the filmmakers relied so heavily on flashbacks that they fill about one-third of the film. If you must watch Santa murder people this spring, you may as well rent the original. Rated R.

Project X may have mysterious sci-fi overtones, but what it boils down to is a story about a man and his monkey. However, even if the plot about strange animal experiments doesn't quite gel, Matthew Broderick and the lead chimp really are cute. Actually, since the cast of about six chimps steal the show, the film ends up having a sweet, family entertainment feel to it. Rated PG. * * 1/2

The Assault, this year's Oscar winner for Best Foreign Film, is an exquisite tale of the effects of war on a child. Woven into an ironic and sad story is a subtle humor that makes this movie about a Dutch WWII orphan tragically realistic. Rated PG. * * 1/2

Hollywood Shuffle's director and star Robert Townsend gets kudos for creativity, as this is a very funny movie, even if it is rough around the edges. Townsend decided to show us a few steps of the Hollywood Shuffle, a dance black actors do in order to get debasing roles as pimps, slaves and rapists. The low budget is obvious, but Townsend has such a stinging sense of humor you can overlook the flaws in favor of all the raw talent he has amassed. Rated R. * * * 1/2

Review from S-10

about and the plot is mired down in a sea of inane details, but Rip Torn manages to shine through as a sheriff with plenty of good 'ol boy humor. This is for people who want to watch a little flesh fly when the bullets hit. Rated R. * 1/2

Silent Night, Deadly Night,

Making Mr. Right has wonderful visuals, an interesting story and a fascinating heroine, played by Ann Magnuson. What it needs is a coherent plot to tie up the flagging story about a woman and her android. A lot of potential, but it is ultimately a bust. Rated PG-13. * *

The Secret of My Success is a shallow, mishmash of a movie that is supposed to be funny, but may actually prove an embarrassment to star Michael J. Fox in his later years. The characters are wooden, the gags weren't thought through and the ending came somewhere out of left field. This is what is known in the professional circle of film critics as a stupid movie. Rated PG-13. *

Police Academy IV: Citizens on Patrol rehearses the same

jokes we've seen three times before. They weren't funny in the last two episodes, and are even more tiresome in this cop caper. Rated PG. *

Swimming to Cambodia is 90 minutes of Spaulding Gray's maniacal outlook on the society we live in. Aside from several cuts to his appearance in The Killing Fields, around which much of his very witty dialogue is focused, Gray sits at a desk with nothing more than a water glass before him and a couple of maps behind him as he spreads his most insightful gospel. Gray spent a lot of time searching for a "perfect moment" while filming in the East, but for us, this film is as near a perfect form of entertainment as most of us will ever encounter. * * * *

We set a day aside each year and call it Mother's Day.
We bring her cards or flowers that all have this to say.
We love you, Mom, with all our heart,
you mean a lot to us.
You sacrificed your time each day
all without a fuss.
You gave us strength when we were weak.
You taught us when and how to speak.
You gave us hope when all seemed lost.
You gave your best at any cost.
I thank God when e'er I pray,

ROVING from S-1

have easily just rusted off along the highway someplace."

Richard drove home, hoping he wouldn't get pulled over by the police. He'd never lost a license plate before, and wasn't sure how the police would react to his dilemma. He said, "All I could imagine was getting pulled over, not being able to explain my way out of it, and ending up with a major fine and having to walk home, taboot."

He managed to get home without attracting the attention of the police. "I wasn't home for more than a few minutes when the telephone rang. It was my boss at work. He told me he had my plate at the office, that apparently it had fallen off in the parking lot. Needless to say, I was happy as heck, because now I didn't have to go through all the aggravation of notifying the police, the insurance company, and goodness knows who else."

The next morning, Richard attempted to drive to work without his plate. For the second time he lucked out; no police had noticed that he was driving without a license plate.

"As soon as I got to work I got hold of some coat hanger wire, and immediately re-attached my plate to my car. I wasn't going to take any chances getting home without it before putting it back on."

Richard drove around for about two weeks with the plate attached to the back of his car with just coat hanger wire. "I knew it wasn't a smart idea to leave the plate attached that way very long," he went on, adding, "but I knew I was buying a new car within a very short time, so I decided to take the chance that I wouldn't lose it."

Murphy's Law just loves guys who think that way. No sooner was he comfortable that nothing would happen to his place before purchasing a new car when he emerged from the Burlington Mall one afternoon to discover the plate missing again.

"God, I could have kicked myself," he exclaimed. "How could I have been so stupid? I took one look at the dangling coat hanger wire, and knew that I'd pushed my luck too far."

Richard drove back to work, once again hoping to dodge any police cruiser that might come his way. "When I arrived back at the office I called a friend of mine who is on the Wilmington Police Department. I asked him what I should do. He told me to call the police and report the plate lost or stolen. If I didn't, he said I might find myself in some hot water, especially if the plate was stolen with the intention of using it in a crime."

He took his buddy's advice and called the police right away. "I proceeded to tell the officer on the other end of the line exactly what happened, how I discovered my plate either lost or stolen earlier that day," he related matter-of-factly. "I began volunteering information that I thought he might need, when suddenly he interrupts and says, 'I'll ask the questions, you answer them.' I thought, jeez, this guy's acting as if I'm a criminal and I'm doing something wrong. All I wanted to do was report my plate missing, and ask what I should do about it. Well, to make a long story short, he ended up asking questions that called for the same information I'd already given him. I guess he just wanted to feel as though he was doing his job. Then I asked him if it would be O.K. to put a piece of cardboard with my registration written on it in my back window, since I was buying a new car within a few days anyway. He told me that he couldn't officially tell me that it was all right to do that, but he did say that, as long as I had my registration and insurance papers in the car at all times, I probably wouldn't be bothered by the police."

Richard, comfortable with the thought that his license plate number was in the police computer, went ahead and made a makeshift license plate out of a piece of white cardboard. When he was finished he taped it to the inside of his back window.

"I was convinced that that would do just dandy until I purchased my new car," he said. "I wanted to register the new car separately and not transfer my old plate, so I didn't think it mattered that I didn't have the old plate to turn in."

His next step was to notify the insurance company that he was about to purchase a new car and that he wanted to cancel the insurance on his old car by a specific date. "The guy I spoke to at the insurance company had me more confused than the cop I'd spoken to at the police station. My insurance company said that, since I didn't have a plate to turn in to the registry, I'd have to either write a letter to the registry informing them of such, or I had to go to the registry and fill out a form. "Once the form was filled out, then I'd be able to cancel my insurance. I said, 'But my insurance is paid up on the old car, and it is about to run out in a month or two, so why can't you just make note that the car is off the road and forget about it. The police know about the missing plate, and I'll be insuring a new car shortly.' The guy at the insurance company told me, 'Oh, no, you can't do it that way. You have to follow the procedures precisely, or you might find yourself in a mess.' I felt like I was already in a mess, a dandy mess."

Richard resigned himself to going to the registry to fill out the form the insurance company said had to be filled out before the old insurance could be cancelled. "But I wasn't about to do it that day," he added. "I was bull, and all I would have needed was an argument from some cranky old woman at the registry to really ruin my day. I decided I'd do it after I bought my new car and got it on the road."

It was at this point that things got sticky in the life of Richard Collins. He explained, "I was about to get into my car a couple of mornings later when a cruiser pulled up to my house. I couldn't figure out for the life of me why the police would be visiting me that early in the morning. Then it dawned on me: oh, God, I hope that stolen plate of mine wasn't used in a robbery."

The officers approached Richard and wanted to know why his car had no license plate on it. "I tried to explain the whole story, but they looked at me as if I had two heads. Then they informed me that a car matching the description of my car and bearing my registration number was reportedly seen leaving the site of a hold-up of a convenient store in someplace like Dorchester or Chelsea. I said, 'Well, the description of the car has to be a coincidence, and if the robbers did use my plate, I'm protected, because I reported it stolen.' Well, they didn't buy it. According to them, there was no record of my plate being reported lost or stolen. I said, 'You've got to be kidding me, I phoned it in the minute I discovered it gone.' Well, somehow the information never made the computer, and I was now the chief suspect in an armed robbery in Dorchester or Chelsea."

Richard had to go to the police station to straighten out the confusion over his missing license plate. "While I was there I was told, 'You know, son, you should have called this in right away.' Well, I did phone it in right away, I told them. But they just stared at me, you know, with that look, the kind of look that says 'You're guilty as sin, boy.' I finally convinced them that I wasn't a robber, and they were finally convinced that my plate was most likely stolen and used in that convenient store hold-up."

The next day Richard received a call from the police. "You wouldn't believe what they told me," he said. "They told me that the robbers had been caught that morning, and that, yes, the car was similar to my old car, but the license plate was not mine. Apparently the witness had screwed up two of the numbers, and the plate ended up being described as my number. So the whole thing had turned out to be one great big mistake. I felt relieved and ticked off at the same time.

Richard decided to rush out to buy that new car. Which brought him to the registry on this particular morning. As we both approached the front of the line, he interjected, "By the way, the funniest thing of all is this: last night I got a call from my boss again. He told me a fellow employee found my license plate and turned it in. My boss couldn't believe that I actually lost the darn thing twice. I told him, 'If you think you're amazed, wait till I tell you what's happened to me in the last couple of days.'"

After hearing a story like that, this columnist was grateful to just be standing in a long line at the registry.

Woburn

buried, had a thrilling adventure which he never fully divulged, but of which he told enough for the public to know; it was with a ghost, from which he escaped with considerable difficulty ..."

Another story involved a Samuel Caldwell who, returning from courting his future wife, "heard the chink of money at the tree, while at the same time he saw the ghost, like a ball of fire, rise up out of the pond, and approach him with dreadful cries ... he found next morning that a lock of his black hair had been turned gray ... and that his hat looked as if it had been scorched on top."

"On still another occasion, a boy driving cows to pasture let them go to the pond to drink ... He happened to go near the tree, when lo, immediately one of the cows became violently agitated, and with a loud bellow, ran out of the water, with her tail up, when the boy perceived with horror that the ghost was on the cow's back, holding on to her tail."

According to tradition, Converse reported, Deacon Josiah Wright had been visited by the same ghost in a dream three nights in a row, and told to visit the tree on a certain date, at midnight. He went, taking along his horse pistol and a hayfork:

"The wind moaned sadly through the branches overhead, when suddenly the silence was broken by unearthly screams issuing from the tree, while at the same time he saw two balls of fire apparently glaring at him from the mysterious cavity. The Deacon's hair stood on end, at least as much as it could do so, on account of the resistance of his hat."

"He poised his pitch-fork ready to defend himself, and examined his pistol only to find it was not loaded. The perspiration started from every pore," as Wright realized it was only a "great cat owl, disturbed by his coming, who had cried out and flown away."

Finally, Wright decided he was supposed to speak first. He did so and the ghost reportedly replied — asking if Wright could withstand the terror of seeing a supernatural being.

Wright uttered a faint "yes," according to Converse. Soon a dim blue light "slowly began to descend the tree ... when it reached the ground, it ... at last disclosed a human skeleton ... The Deacon's teeth chattered, and those of the spirit rattled," as it spoke to reveal itself as the ghost of Wright's father who "committed suicide by hanging himself to a branch of this oak, for which crime I am condemned by a Power whom none can resist, to keep guard over the treasure which lies concealed ... till you acquire a legal title to this piece of land, pond and tree, without the payment of money therefor, and without the taking of any deed or other written instrument."

The ghost reportedly then gave the exact location of the treasure but warned that if Wright tried to unearth it without fulfilling the conditions, "I shall be compelled to do my duty, and seize and smother you in the deadly gas which surrounds me."

Wright went home, consulted a lawyer, and proceeded to try to obtain possession of the land by claiming title, using it, and thus maintaining "adverse right" of ownership against all others. He never actually perfected his title to the whole portion, obtained the treasure or saw the ghost again, according to Converse. But neither, on the other hand, was he smothered in deadly gas.

Converse: "Tradition says that Wright, having failed to establish his claim ... a certain man in Woburn, who suddenly acquired riches in some mysterious manner ... was said to have accidentally found out Deacon Wright's secret, and thereupon consulted one Andrew Evans, a man who lived in a hut in the Frog-hole Woods, and had the reputation of being in league with certain powers ... (He) found out from him how to exorcise the ghost, obtained the treasure and released its guardian from further duty over it."

"The very next spring, the old oak ... without apparent cause, withered away and died."

Stop pollution, plant trees

For years, city officials have planted trees along metropolitan thoroughfares, mainly because they are beautiful. Now, however, scientists are discovering that trees have other attributes. According to an article by Mike Toner in National Wildlife magazine, urban planners are planting trees because they clean up air pollution. National Wildlife is a bimonthly publication of the National Wildlife Federation.

During photosynthesis, trees not only convert carbon dioxide into oxygen but also filter the air of many of its man-made and natural pollutants. Hence, many city planners are using these natural cleaners to help purify the urban environment.

The air cleaning potential of trees is well-documented. Scientists in New Haven, Connecticut, for example, have determined that one large sugar maple can remove as much airborne lead as the city's cars emit by burning a thousand gallons of gasoline. Similarly, city planners in Los Angeles say that by the year 2,000, trees will remove some 200 tons of dust and smoke from the region's air each day.

There are drawbacks to the effectiveness of this plan, not the least of which is the potential damage to the trees themselves. Specifically, too much ozone can actually destroy the stomata — tiny pores — on tree leaves. Worse yet, there is ample evidence to suggest that toxic substances and polluted air can kill trees not only in the city but in forests many miles from any urban environment as well.

Another shortcoming is due to the limited filtering capacity of the trees themselves. A graphic example are the 440,000 maples, oaks, and lindens planted in St. Louis in the early 1970s although they have the potential to remove 340 tons of dust a year from the city's air that is still less than one percent of the city's total annual particulate pollution. Again according to Smith, "Individual trees — even one or two or three rows planted along a street or highway — are not going to help much."

Nonetheless, city planners from Europe to Australia are including trees in their future urban development plans. "In most cities of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, you find tree plantings on a scale that most Americans would not believe," says Leon Dochinger, a plant pathologist at the U.S. Forest Service. And, in the United States, cities such as Dayton, Ohio, have used trees to cleanse the urban atmosphere.

And, despite the limitations, future use of trees in city landscapes seems assured. In just the last five years, Los Angeles has planted a million seedlings to help improve its air quality. Local groups in London and Chicago have also undertaken efforts to revitalize their urban forests. More ambitiously yet, Australian groups have proposed a plan to plant 200 million trees by 1988.

By no means is planting trees the solution to city pollution; that burden falls upon people themselves. In the interim, however, trees have become one of the city planner's best allies in the fight for cleaner air.

The Amazon River carries more water than any other river—more than the Mississippi, the Nile and the Yangtze river together.

Strawberry Festival and Walking Week

DONATION TO PAMELA NIGRO FUND

Respond, Inc., Somerville's shelter for battered women and their children is offering a solution to the "What to get my mother for Mother's Day?" problem. For those who are looking for a gift that will go on giving, here is a creative solution.

Make a donation to the Pamela Nigro Fund in your mother's name! She will receive a gift card stating the amount of your gift and your name. She can feel that she has helped to purchase a much needed shelter for families who are homeless from abuse. She becomes part of a family of friends who are actively helping to end homelessness and abuse. A non-violent approach to end violence. And you can make it happen.

Send your tax-free donation to the Pamela Nigro Fund, c/o Respond, Inc., P.O. Box 555, Somerville, Ma. 02143. Include your mother's name and address. We'll do the rest. And then relax and enjoy Mother's Day, May 10.

ANNUAL STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL

Our Lady of Nazareth Academy located on Winship Drive in Wakefield will conduct its annual Strawberry Festival on Saturday, May 9th from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. rain or shine.

This year, over thirty New England artisans will display their crafts including original and handcrafted articles such as pottery, dried floral arrangements, folk art, soft sculpture, dolls, jewelry and quilts.

In addition, there will be a white elephant table, raffles, amusements and games for children of all ages. The infamous OLN strawberry shortcake will be featured in the food festival along with a collection on baked goods, candies and luncheon specialties. Join the fun. Admission is free!

NATIONAL WALKING WEEK

Governor Michael S. Dukakis wants the residents of Massachusetts to put their best foot forward and take a walk.

That's why an official proclamation was passed declaring the week of May 25-31 to be Sanka National Walking Week in Massachusetts.

The week is a national effort sponsored by the makers of Sanka naturally decaffeinated coffee to promote walking as part of a healthy, active lifestyle. City and state leaders all across the country have lent support to this effort by passing proclamations and encouraging their citizens to get out and walk.

To help local organizations host their own walking events, Sanka has published The Guide to Walking Activities, which contains information about the health benefits of walking, exercise tips and step-by-step guidelines on how to hold a walking event. Also included are details on a free offer of promotional items including banners and T-shirts. The free book is available by writing to: Sanka Walking Week, 888 Seventh Ave., Suite 2800, New York, N.Y. 10106.

Annual Sheep Shearing Festival

SHED WINTER WOOL

After a wild and woolly New England winter, it's time for the 15th Annual Sheep Shearing Festival sponsored by the Museum of American Textile History on Sunday, May 17.

Nearly 10,000 visitors are expected to participate in this lively spring event from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the Old North Andover Common across from the museum. A variety of entertaining and educational events will include sheep shearing, sheepdog demonstrations, 4-H sheep competition, sheep-to-shawl demonstrations, crafts fair, yarn competition, the Great New England Spinning Bee, fleece judging and auction, live music, museum tours, and food booths.

One of the most popular events each year is the sheepdog demonstrations. These dogs, which are border collies bred for sheep herding, will follow their handlers' verbal commands as they herd a flock of sheep through gates and into a pen. The handlers, Betty Levin, Ellen Raja and Virgil Holland of Lincoln, will explain how a sheepdog trial works while the dogs show their skills.

The Sheep Shearing Festival is being made possible through the generosity of AT&T Network Systems, Merrimack Valley Works. The festival will be held rain or shine, and admission is free. The museum is easily reached via I-495 (Exit 43, Mass. Ave.). For more information, call (617) 686-0191.

We head into the many weeks of festivals, fairs and special weeks. COMING ATTRACTIONS will try to be there for most of them, but we miss a few from time to time. For that reason, we could use your help in coming up with events of interest to all. If you have knowledge of just about anything that draws more than two people, write, care of this local newspaper and tell us all about it.
